California, Again.
And Alpha Phi Gamma.
Also W. M. Packer.
And the Big Pacific Ocean.

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

SANTA BARBARA, Cal., Dec. 2.

THIS IS written in the office of T. M. Storke's Santa Barbara "Morning Press," which prints this column, as do many others, along the road from here to New York.

You know about Santa Barbara and that any description must be a great improvement on Byron's simile "the mountains look on Marathon and Marathon looks on the sea."

The mountains that look on Santa Barbara are one thousand times as big as all the mountains in Greece put together, and they run more than a thousand miles along this coast, getting bigger and bigger as they run back east and north.

Santa Barbara also "looks upon the sea," only it's the Pacific Ocean. The poor little Aegean Sea, Mediterranean Sea and the Atlantic Ocean could all be poured into the Pacific and that old ocean would hardly notice the difference.

BETWEEN THE mountains and the sea, the roses and all other flowers bloom. And the Santa Barbara palm trees, not satisfied with raising their fronds in air, must have vines, bearing beautiful flowers climbing up around them, while villas with lovely gardens slope up to the rocky base of the mountain.

Truly, if life were not so unpleasantly real and earnest in these depression days, you would wire back:

"Am never returning, come on out."

THE SOUTHERN PACIFIC from New Orleans, through Louisiana, Texas, New Mexico, Arizona and Southern California, rolls into Los Angeles, "the big city," soon after seven, and the plan, ticket bought and all, was to continue rolling on the S. P. daylight express to San Luis Obispo, thence by motor to the Hearst ranch at San Simeon.

But, as Miss Dorothy Parker says so often, "What can you do" when you receive a wire like this:

"If you are really in a hurry to reach San Simeon I know a big, powerful, speedy, safe Chevrolet with Fisher body that will beat the daylight express to San Luis Obispo by two hours with enough to spare for a look at some of Father Junipero Serra's best efforts en route. There'll be a couple of Chevrolets champing at the bit at Los Angeles. And was my face red when you said you were in a hurry and then picked the escargot-like daylight express—Packer."

The word escargot, fourth from the last, as you know, means "snail" in the French language.

SO, THE journey is being made with Packer, in one of the "champing" Chevrolets. A two-seat machine with the top down, because riding in a closed car, under this sky, would be like walking through Saint Peter's with your umbrella up.

Mr. Packer, who you will be surprised to learn is regional manager in charge of Chevrolets all the way from Seattle to Mexico, and back to Salt Lake City, flies his plane down from Oakland, to drive back, and says flying makes you a better driver, because a mistake in an automobile may not mean much, whereas the same mistake in the air means Heaven.

He drives with the left hand, slowly for him, about sixty miles an hour, and uses the right hand for gestures, in telling about "knee-action springs" that enable one front wheel only to rise, when you hit a bump, or go over a stone.

INTERRUPTION here, to go and talk to the "Alpha Phi Gamma national honorary coeducational journalistic fraternity." Entertained at Salba's fish restaurant, on the dock. Stop there some time.

The Santa Barbara Pi Chapter of Santa Barbara College is host. Sixty fine young people, boys and girls, ask intelligent questions, and make you a member of Alpha Phi Gamma, only you must come back and be regularly initiated, "because you know," says Inez, last name unknown, "you must promise to devote your life to newspaper work."

IF YOU have never driven along the edge of the Pacific, put it off no longer.

When you have crossed this continent twice, by the North and South routes, traveled on this coast from San Diego and the Mexican border to Seattle and north to Vancouver, then from Miami, north to Maine, you know something about the United States. If you can do that ten, or fifty times, so much the better.

GEORGE YOUNG, publisher of the Los Angeles Examiner, is willing to admit that he has the finest daily and Sunday paper west of anywhere, but will not admit that it is necessary to see anything more than Los Angeles, between the cradle and the grave.

"Everything on earth is to be found here, without cold weather and with longer life. Why wander away, or seek farther, when you have found the best."

He tells you to read Xenophon's "Anabasis," and:

"You will find that you will always be glad to get back to Los Angeles as he was to get back to Greece."

Then he mentions something in Greek that sounds like "Thalassa."

BUT TO GET back to the Alpha Phi Gamma, of which you are now a member "pledged

POLICE BEAT MEXICANS, PROBE ON

Three Officers Admit Charge, Declaring Men Were Armed

Three Pittsburgh policemen today said they welcomed a full investigation by the Mexican government of their arrest of two Mexicans Thursday night in an alley near the Diamond garage, Diamond and North Diamond streets.

Eduardo Malvino, 27, one of the Mexicans, is in Allegheny General Hospital with a fractured jaw. The other, Armando Robeldo, 35, is there with both jaws fractured.

TWO TELL OF HOLDUP

Radio Policemen Albert Kidd, James Dilworth and Hughie Haggerty admit they manhandled the pair, but allege they did so after Malvido advanced on them with a loaded .45 caliber revolver and Robledo with a .38 caliber gun and an open knife.

Their testimony was in a measure corroborated today after Harry Atwood, of 915 Sandusky street, and George Ossman, of 51 Perryview avenue, both North Side, identified the pair as the two Mexicans who Thursday night stopped them at the point of guns at the Diamond street alley.

The policemen went to the garage in response to a call for assistance from Thomas Poulas, night attendant, who said when he asked the Mexicans to pay for a broken glass on a gasoline tank they threatened him.

ATTACHE OF CONSULATE

Malvido, who lives at the Central Y. M. C. A., is an attache of the Mexican consulate here. Robledo lives in a rooming house at 117 West Ohio street, North Side.

Jose A. Valenzula, Mexican consul, could not be reached for a statement today.

Collapses

MRS. MARK H. SHANK

Mrs. Shank, who collapsed, was carried from court on a stretcher after the conviction of her husband, Mark, the Akron attorney, for the death of Alvin H. Colley, fatally poisoned with his wife and two children. He's to die.

BANK GUARDIAN FOR M'CREADY

Judge Frank P. Patterson announced in Common Pleas Court today that he has appointed the Union Trust Company as guardian for Harrison R. McCready, Fox Chapel playboy, now seeking to break a trust of $150,000 he established in 1930 for his first wife and child.

McCready, supportitng the plea of his cousin, Ray L. Worley, for the appointment of a guardian, testified that he is addicted to drink and "no longer dare trust myself in business affairs."

During the trial on the suit to break the trust, which will be resumed Monday before Judge Patterson, Carol P. Davis, trust officer of the Union Trust Company, expressed a willingness to act as guardian for McCready.

Martin Insull Loses Extradition Battle

TORONTO, Dec. 2.—(AP.)—Martin J. Insull, former Chicago utilities director, lost his fight against extradition to the United States today when Justice A. C. Kingstone, of the Ontario Supreme Court, granted the appeal of Cook County, Ill., for his return.

TRIO HOLDS UP 3 WOMEN

Three women were walking in Chateau street, North Side, toward their homes last night when an automobile drew close to the curb and stopped. Out stepped three men, each grabbed a woman's purse, backed into the machine and sped away.

A few minutes before the same trio of men had held up a drug store in Oakland, police believe.

The women, who told police their losses were trivial, said they were Mrs. Nellie Miller, of 1506 Chateau street; Mrs. K. Grambel, of 1012 Chateau street, and Mrs. Carrie Bunny, of 1423 Pennsylvania avenue. They were not harmed.

The automobile, an expensive make, was found abandoned at Fontella and Reedsdale streets early today. It was believed to have been stolen. Its occupants were Negroes.

During the absence of the night manager, the trio held up Philip Marcus, 17, clerk in the Frankenstein's Pharmacy in the Medical Arts Building, 3400 Fifth avenue, and escaped with $20 from the cash register and 15 cents from Marcus.

Youth Seeks Police Aid To Join Bride, Jailed

A bridegroom, 19, was freed in Morals Court today to join his 16-year-old bride of a week, after spending a night behind cell bars.

Explaining his arrest yesterday near the home of his bride's parents, Robert Glenn, of 1081 Lonsdale street, testified he merely wanted to see his girl-wife, who, before her marriage, was Anna McLiesh, of 7422 Felicia way, a Westinghouse High School student.

After their marriage in Greensburg last Saturday, the girl returned to her parents and he to his own home, he told Magistrate T. D. Jones. He was taken into custody when he asked for police protection in getting back his bride.

Mrs. Blanche McLiesh, the girl's mother, said her only objection to the marriage was her daughter's youth and the fact that young Glenn didn't have a steady job. Glenn said he obtained a marriage license after working four days and being promised work all winter.

SHANK DRAWS DEATH FOR 4 POISONINGS

Plea of Insanity by Akron Attorney Disregarded

BENTON, Ark., Dec. 2.—(AP.)—A jury unconvinced by his plea of insanity has ordered the death penalty for Mark H. Shank, Akron, O., attorney, convicted of the poison murder of Alvin Colley.

Shank is also under indictment for the murder of Colley's wife and two of their children. All died from poison placed in grape juice at a picnic last August 15.

The verdict was returned late last night by the jury after deliberating nine hours. The defendant showed no emotion but his wife, given credit for much of the work of planning his defense, collapsed and was carried from the courtroom to her hotel on a stretcher.

NEW TRIAL SOUGHT

Defense attorneys announced they would renew the fight to free Shank. He has until next Thursday to file motion for a new trial, notice of which was given after the verdict was reported. If the motion is overruled, the attorney will be sentenced to death immediately. He will have 60 days in which to file an appeal.

Apparently no more concerned over the verdict than he had been in any proceedings of the trial, Shank was rushed to the Little Rock jail where he had been held since the crime. He was still in the apparent stupor in which he has been throughout the trial.

PLEA OF INSANITY

Shank's counsel based its hopes for an acquittal on a plea of insanity. Testimony was allowed to go into the records blaming third degree methods for his alleged confession. His chief attorney, Nathan McDaniel, had pleaded in final argument that the defendant is "crazy as he can be and his every act since he left Akron and came to Arkansas is that of an insane person."

Against the plea of the defense, the prosecution contended the crime was motivated by Shank's fear of the possibility of being implicated with Colley in the alleged theft of documents from the prosecutor's office at Barberton, O., and his desire to preserve his reputation and "to keep out of the penitentiary."

Reward Offer Spurs Jerusalem Spying

JERUSALEM, Dec. 2.—(AP.)—Police have offered a shilling per head—"a bob a nob" as it was described—for information regarding Jews in Palestine who do not have permission to stay permanently.

The action led to what was called an outbreak of spying by Oriental Jews, against which many persons protested.

Spanish Ship Crew Rescued by British

FISHGUARD, Wales, Dec. 2.—(AP.)—The British steamer Deebank wirelessed today she had rescued the 26 members of the crew of the Spanish steamer Gloria, sinking in the Irish Sea.

The Deebank went to the assistance of the Spanish ship when the Gloria reported her engine room and two holds were flooded.

CHILDREN, AGED PAIR RESCUED FROM FIRE

Seven Saved as Blaze Damages Two Houses On North Side

Five young children and an aged man and woman were rescued today when fire broke out in two frame houses at 1823 and 1825 Metropolitan street, North Side.

The fire, which started on the second floor at 1823 Metropolitan street, spread to the same floor in the adjoining house. Battalion Chief Alex Reed, of the Sixth District, estimated the damage at $500. Cause of the fire is undetermined.

Mrs. Esther Barker, going downstairs in her home at 1823 Metropolitan street to heat milk for her 16-month-old daughter, Joan, discovered the fire. She sped upstairs for the baby and called to her husband, Carl J., who was dressing to go to work. He ran to the third floor and led his father, Charles N. Barker, 67, to safety.

Next door, at 1825 Metropolitan street, Wilbert Hanna, 18, was awakened and smelled smoke on the second floor. He called to his cousin, Reta Ermine, 8, and then awakened his aunt, Mrs. George Kelly. They then led Mrs. Kelly's children, Martha, 3, Robert, 2, and Catherine, 1, to safety. Young Hanna then went to the third floor and rescued Mrs. Agnes McComb, 62. George Kelly, the husband, had gone to work.

DOOMED THIRD TIME IN ATTACK

DECATUR, Ala., Dec. 2.—(AP.)—Convicted a third time in less than three years on a charge of attacking a white woman, Heywood Patterson, one of seven Negro defendants in the "Scottsboro case," again was under sentence of death today.

Unmoved, the 21-year-old Chattanooga (Tenn.) Negro last night heard a Morgan County jury return the verdict he had heard on two previous occasions.

Patterson was convicted on a charge of attacking Mrs. Victoria Price, who, with Ruby Bates, was alleged to have been attacked by the Negroes abroad a freight train in Jackson County, Alabama, on March 25, 1931.

Seated beside Patterson as the verdict was read was Clarence Norris, second of the defendants to be tried at this term of court. Judge W. W. Callahan was preparing to swear in a jury for the trial of Norris, starting today at the time the Patterson jury reported its decision after 25 hours' deliberation.

Fascists Threaten Heckler of King

LONDON, Dec. 2.—(INS.)—John McGovern, Scottish Laborite M. P., who heckled King George at the end of the monarch's speech pompously opening Parliament, has been threatened with tarring and feathering by Fascists, Scotland Yard revealed today.

On receipt of an anonymous letter disclosing the alleged plot, Scotland Yard took measures to watch closely for any Fascist activity in the vicinity of the Houses of Parliament.

Slain Mate's Estate Goes to Mrs. Clark

WOODBURY, N. J., Dec. 2.—(AP.)—Mrs. Audrey Smith Clark, former Broadway dancer, is the sole beneficiary for life of the estate of her husband, Sheldon A. Clark, Jr., for whose shooting she was arrested, but not indicted.

Clark's will, probated by the Gloucester County Surrogate, disposes of an estate estimated at $50,000 "and upwards."

Corse Payton, Hero Of Melodramas, Ill

NEW YORK, Dec. 2.—(AP.)—Corse Payton, who made millions sob when he played the melodrama "Over the Hill to the Poorhouse," was ill today of pneumonia in a hospital's charity ward.

Mr. Smith's Position

MR. AL SMITH, of Tammany and Wall Street, writing in the prostituted columns of the Outcast, delivers himself of a long and labored wisecrack about the NRA, the RFC, the CWA, etc.

Mr. Smith surmises that the President's professors have been playing anagrams with the alphabet soup and that the soup has gotten cold.

Let no one jump to the conclusion that Mr. Smith does not know what he is talking about.

Al certainly ought to know better than anybody else the temperature of the political soup.

He has been in it ever since 1928.

However, Al should remember that what is cold soup for him is duck soup for the President and for the nation.

Perhaps the noblest thing that Mr. Roosevelt has done is the creation of the CWA to give those in need immediate relief work, instead of charity.

BUT ALL of the combinations of initials which Mr. Smith so cynically derides are better than the OMD—Old Man Depression—into which Mr. Smith's Wall Street friends cruelly plunged us and out of which Mr. Roosevelt is heroically trying to lift us.

Honest and constructive suggestion to the President about any public matter is valuable, but bitter and biased criticism is harmful—harmful to the critic and harmful to the country.

"Let me make my position unmistakable," says Al, using a dollar word on the Wall Street gold basis.

We beg to assure Mr. Smith that his position is ABSOLUTELY unmistakable.

It is the customary position of the political sorehead.

Lilian Harvey Balks At Foreign Versions

HOLLYWOOD, Dec. 2.—(INS.)—Lilian Harvey, English-born and German-trained film actress, was in an open break with the Fox Film Corporation today.

Her artistic reputation in Europe would be ruined if "dubbed in" German and French versions of her English-speaking pictures are distributed abroad she charged in a suit to restrain Fox from compelling her to make sound records in French and German to be used in films in which she is featured.

Ellsworth Vines Loses Auto Suit

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 2.—(AP.)—Injured when struck by a motor car owned by Ellsworth Vines, Jr., tennis champion, and driven by George Vines, his young brother, John Frank Albright has won a judgment for $3,500 against the two and their mother, Mrs. Caroline L. Vines.

The judgment was ordered yesterday by Superior Judge C. L. Bogue, in whose court Albright had sued for $30,000.

U. S. Debt Reaches Peace-Time Record

WASHINGTON, Dec. 2.—(AP.)—The United States public debt increased $483,859,000 during November to a total of $23,534,115,771, a new peace-time high.

CITY MOURNS R. B. MELLON

Tributes from the nation's financial and industrial leaders today poured into the home of Richard Beatty Mellon, who died yesterday after a brief illness.

Flags on municipal buildings were at half-mast today on order of Mayor John S. Herron, out of respect to the late financier. They will remain so until Monday.

The list of honorary pallbearers, completed this morning, includes names of men high in the financial, civic and business world.

The Rev. Dr. Stuart Nye Hutchison, pastor of the East Liberty Presbyterian Church, of which Mr. Mellon was a member, will officiate at funeral services in the Mellon home, 6500 Fifth avenue, at 3 p. m. tomorrow. The services will be open to the public. The interment in Allegheny Cemetery will be private.

The body, covered by a silk blanket provided by Mrs. W. L. Mellon, will be placed in a receiving vault in Allegheny Cemetery, pending the widow's decision either to have it interred in the family lot or to await the possible construction of a mausoleum.

Mr. Mellon's sudden death cast a shadow over the completion of the new East Liberty Presbyterian Church, being built on the site where Mr. Mellon's mother, Sarah Jane Negley, was born, and where his grandmother had erected the first East Liberty Presbyterian Church, a little wooden edifice, in 1819.

LEGAL AID ENLISTED IN SCRAMBLE

Blanks Hot From Presses Speeded Back to Capital

With the arrival in the mail today of liquor license applications to holders of 3.2 beer li censes, it became evident that th purpose of the recent state po lice inspection of beer dispense was to determine their fitness sell liquor.

Liquor dispensing applicatio will be mailed to every restaura and hotel passing the state i spection and failure to receive liquor blank might be constru as failure to pass the state polic scrutiny. One of the questions asked by the troopers in their inspection was:

"Do you intend to apply for a liquor license?"

SPEED APPLICATIONS

Meanwhile the applications of nearly a score of Pittsburgh restaurants were in Harrisburg today—among the first for consideration by the State Liquor Control Board.

Facilities for license application and surety bonding were offered to members of the Western Pennsylvania Restaurant Association at a meeting of the organization last night in the William Penn Hotel.

The applications made following the meeting were rushed on a late train to Harrisburg by the association's counsel, James A. Wright, who will escort them through legal machinery at the Capitol to insure their return here in time to greet repeal.

GRABBED FROM PRESSES

The application blanks—the first to arrive here—were grabbed right from the presses in Harrisburg yesterday by attorneys retained there by the restaurant organization.

The action was necessary to enable Pittsburgh restaurant men to obtain licenses in time, Ross Gammon, chairman of the organization, said.

It became known yesterday the control board would be able to grant licenses to comparatively few of the state's restaurants in time for them to benefit by the early repeal trade.

PRICES IN DOUBT

Announcing that the meeting was called to "discuss liquor and to get licenses in a hurry," Mr. Gammon announced his organization was planning to obtain the control board's permission to run liquor into the city for storage until repeal.

Gammon made it plain to the 850 restaurant men who crowded the urban room that the association would continue to function as a restaurant organization. He said:

"This is a restaurant association, not a liquor dealers' asso-

2-Pound Baby Shows No Gain in Five Days

The tiny daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Hecker was five days old today, but she wasn't any heavier than the day she was born in the Pittsburgh Maternity Hospital, 3625 Forbes street, when she weighed 2 pounds 3½ ounces. The child is fed every two hours from a one-ounce milk bottle.

Speed on Social Bills Next Aim of Pinchot

International News Service.

HARRISBURG, Dec. 2.—Gov. Pinchot proposed today to go before the General Assembly again, probably Monday night, and urge legislators to adopt bills embracing his recommendations for social legislation as rapidly as they passed liquor regulatory laws.

This was learned authoritatively by International News Service coincident with the revelation from reliable sources that Republican organization leaders have "decided" to accept some of the Governor's program, ditch many other points, and go home before Christmas.

Their slogan for the extraordinary session now is:

"We hope to adjourn by December 14 and really expect to clear the decks by December 22."

With all plans pointing to the fulfillment of this program, members of both Houses are being in structed to be prepared to remai in the capital for Friday session next week.

The Governor's social legislatio proposals consist of old age pensions, unemployment insuranc minimum wage and maximu hour laws, and adoption of th federal child labor constitution amendment.

The Legislature appears re to approve bills, supported by the American Legion, to permit payment of a soldiers' bonus by issuing $50,000,000 in bonds. Leaders also are expected to push through the remainder of the Governor's liquor program and possibly accept his ideas for the earmarking of $20,000,000 of liquor profits for relief purposes.

M'NAIR MAY STUMP STATE TO PUSH TAX PROGRAM

SEEKS TO SPUR LEGISLATURE TO ACTION

Powers' Backing Gives Hope for Plan at Special Session

By HOWARD L. BROWNING, JR.
Staff Correspondent.

MIAMI, Fla., Dec. 2.—A statewide stumping tour may be the strategy to which William N. McNair, Pittsburgh's Democratic mayor-elect, will resort in behalf of the graded tax measures now pending before the Legislature.

McNair is considering the move unless Pennsylvania's lawmakers soon show signs of advancing the proposals, which would extend Pittsburgh's graded tax law to county and school tax.

The bills contemplate a taxation ratio of 5 mills on land to 1 on improvements.

HOPE HAD WANED

McNair had nearly abandoned hope of introduction of his proposals in the special session when Representative John L. Powers stepped forth as his champion. The Mayor-elect said today:

"If the special session doesn't pass the bills, my term of office will be almost over before the graded tax gets another chance. And if the special session does pass them, they'll be in effect when I take office in January.

"That's what I want."

McNair had refused to ask introduction of the measures, declining to obligate himself politically. But after Powers' action, he admitted:

"Of course, I'll look favorably on people who like what I like."

SENDS POSTCARD

And to Powers McNair immediately sent a postcard reading:

"I want to express my appreciation of your introducing my graded tax bill."

It was a pretty postcard and McNair said:

"Wouldn't he rather get this nice picture of Miami Beach than just a telegram?"

And now that the bills are introduced, that postcard isn't all the co-operation Powers may have.

McNair is serious when he considers stumping the key cities of the state in advocacy of the proposals. He says:

"Maybe when people from all over the state start writing in that they want Pittsburgh to have the graded tax law, the Legislature'll do something about it.

"I think Pittsburgh showed it wanted these bills when it elected me Mayor. And if I tell that to people in Lancaster, Erie, Harrisburg, Altoona, Philadelphia and such places, things may be easier."

FIX NEWSPAPER CODE HEARING

Universal Service.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 2.—The newspaper code, which has been a bone of contention in NRA for several months, may be ready to go to President Roosevelt on Monday.

Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, relief administrator, said he would hold a hearing Monday on the code, presiding personally in the absence of Deputy Administrator Lindsay Rogers, who is ill. The hearing will be here, but Johnson did not know whether it would be public.

Johnson stated recently there was "just one little point at issue in the code" and that he expected this to be cleared up without much further delay.

He declined to say what that point was, but insisted there would be no serious disagreement over freedom of speech and licensing provisions.

Ford Gets U. S. Order Despite NRA Stand

WASHINGTON, Dec. 2.—(AP.)—Henry Ford may not be flying the Blue Eagle, but he is so nearly complying with the automobile code that one of his dealers today has a new contract to furnish possibly 700 trucks for the Civilian Conservation Corps.

There may, however, be subsequent study of whether the bid which won the contract for the Bethesda, (Md.) Ford dealer was under the minimum price fixed by the code.

Agreement to award the contract was announced by Secretary Wallace, who said the decision had been concurred in by Hugh S. Johnson, NRA chief.

For weeks the automobile purchases had been held up while officials decided whether the government would buy from Ford since he had not signed the code.

Comptroller General J. R. McCarl held that even though Ford had not signed, his dealers' bids were acceptable if he were complying with code terms.

Even Johnson said Ford was complying. But subsequently Johnson wondered publicly whether the bid for the trucks—the government may take as many as 700—was under the code minimum. That was referred to McCarl, who said that was a question for "judicial determination" and not for the purchasing officer to decide.

Wallace said the decision to accept the Ford bid was based "on the advice of the Controller General as to the best way to secure compliance with the President's recovery program."

ciation. There will be no concoction of prune juice and sugar sold; there will be nothing less than blended liquor sold in restaurants in this district."

While nothing was said at the meeting regarding the price of a drink or a bottle, a price discussion ended with an agreement that there would be no price cutting among the restaurants in the association.

WAR ON SPEAKEASY

A motion was passed to petition the control board not to license eating places that had not been in business six months prior to repeal. Gammon said the board would not be able to determine whether the places were "reputable"—as specified in the liquor act—unless they had been in business before repeal.

Another resolution, notifying the board that the association would back them in an effort to stamp out the speakeasy and the illegal liquor salesman, was passed.

The meeting closed with a discussion of the various phases of the control act.

State Mails 10,000 Liquor Applications

HARRISBURG, Dec. 2.—(AP.)—Liquor officially will go on sale in Pennsylvania next Tuesday the minute ratification of the Twenty-first Amendment by the 36 states becomes known.

One of the three states to ratify Tuesday, completing the 36 required to abolish federal prohibition, Pennsylvania expects to be the thirty-fourth, to be followed within two hours by Ohio and Utah.

Richard J. Beamish, secretary of the commonwealth, said advices from Washington are that prohibition will be repealed the minute the thirty-sixth state repeal convention casts its official ballot.

Immediately after Pennsylvania ballot is cast, an airplane being offered by repealist groups is expected to carry it to Washington. To guard against difficulties, if an airplane is used, another ballot will be sent by registered mail.

Machinery to license hotels, clubs and restaurants to sell liquor began turning today as more than 10,000 applications went out to places that handle 3.2 beer.

U. S. TO BARGAIN ON RUM TRADE

WASHINGTON, Dec. 2.—(AP.)—The federal government—its liquor control setup nearly completed—today dangled before foreign countries a possible $50,000,000 annual business as a reward for lowering trade barriers against American products.

Domestic and importing liquor industries already were under codes and agreements, so that Uncle Sam stood behind one of his best bargain counters for years.

His attitude was that "if you want my liquor business after repeal you must do business with me, on my own terms."

With repeal coming Tuesday, negotiations were being carried on with European and South American countries for facts assuring an exchange of American surplus farm and industrial products for imported spirits and wines.

Temporary quotas had been allocated to foreign nations for immediate shipment of about 4,000,000 gallons of spirits and wines to meet consumption demands in the next two months.

VOTE MACHINES STILL FAULTY

Following a demonstration of improvements, Allegheny County's 1,100 voting machines today still don't work. A change in the length of the intermittent links will not prevent double voting for a candidate. Before the County Commissioners and the Harris Voting Machine Committee yesterday, Attorney William B. McFall, Jr., of the committee, exposed the defect by applying pressure to a straight party lever and a single button in another party.

The force required to register the double vote sheared edges from a cog in contact with the intermittent link, examination showed. A different setting of the links was suggested.

Four types of indorsed candidate links were demonstrated by Albert Lauer, chief mechanic of the Department of Elections, and mechanics who worked on the experiments.

SCHOOL BOARD READY TO SET TAX RATE

Action to Be Based On Proposed Budget Cut of $60,000

Millage for 1934 school taxes was to be set today by the Board of Public Education, following final recommendations yesterday by the Committee on Finance and Administration which would effect a total budget cut of $60,000.

Budget slashes recommended by the committee include $6,750 in after-school and Saturday playground expenses; $110,000 in bond issue service for the board's building program; a reduction of approximately $3,000 in workmen's compensation, and $50,470 in repairs and improvements.

NEW COSTS LISTED

Items added include $7,920 for sight-saving classes, taking in expenditures for four teachers' salaries and equipment; $100,000 for food for needy children, and $30,000 additional for coal.

Of the bond issue cut, Marcus Aaron, president of the board, said:

"Ordinarily I would not be in favor of postponing this item under any circumstances, but I believe the moment has come when it is necessary."

APPEAL BY LEAGUE

In a letter to the committee, the Allegheny County Real Estate Owners' and Taxpayers' League reiterated its plea for a substantial reduction in 1934 school taxes. Signed by I. Leonard Aronson, president of the league, the letter read, in part:

"In their report, dated January 23, 1933, the board's own special committee of prominent citizens recommended that the board should make a very substantial reduction in 1934 taxes.

"We will not be satisfied if your committee does not recommend to the board, and if the board does not accept that recommendation, deep cuts in administrative, building, maintenance, debt service and other items without making the teaching force bear the burden of any further cuts in salaries.

"We do hope that there is sufficient humaneness in the hearts of the majority of the board to realize the necessity of doing something definite and concrete towards relieving the distressed taxpayer, insofar as possible."

'WAXEY' MEETS CAPONE'S FATE

NEW YORK, Dec. 2.—(AP.)—Waxey Gordon, beer baron and New York's public enemy No. 1, is in the Federal House of Detention today, facing a 10-year prison sentence and a fine of $80,000 for evasion of income taxes.

He was convicted yesterday of evading and conspiring to evade income taxes in 1930 and 1931, during which years, the government contended, he made $2,365,403, but paid only $2,615.76.

Sentence was passed by Federal Judge Frank J. Coleman, who called Gordon, also known as Irving Wexler, "a gang leader of the worst type," who has had "such success in crime that nothing will ever wean him from such a course save actual imprisonment."

The sentence, only four years less than the maximum possible, puts Gordon in a class with Al Capone, who was sentenced to 11 years in prison and fined $50,000 in a similar case in Chicago.

CITY, COUNTY SPEED WORK FOR 25,000

Committee of Council Approves Sale of $1,200,000 Bonds

Spurred by the report of Eric H. Biddle, state CWA head, city and county officials are speeding plans to provide jobs for 25,000 of Allegheny County's unemployed.

Council's finance committee yesterday approved an ordinance authorizing the sale of $1,200,000 worth of bonds voted on last year by the people of Pittsburgh. The money will be used to buy materials and equipment for CWA projects in the city.

The ordinance will come up for final passage on Monday. Yearly interest of 4½ per cent on the bonds, which are for a 20-year period, was approved by the committee to quicken their sale.

Jobs created by the CWA are being filled at 108 Smithfield street under the direction of Harold F. Bucher.

According to Mr. Bucher, men are chosen with regard to their "experience, ability and economic status." Special preference is shown to war veterans, but no other group or individual is favored.

The lottery system of job-allotment, adopted in Illinois by the CWA when applicants outnumbered jobs by six to one, will not be used in Pittsburgh.

All applicants will be checked as to their capabilities and needs for work, and will be chosen accordingly. Mr. Bucher said:

"These are real jobs—there is real work to be done, and we want real men to do it."

Pay checks will be handed out every Saturday, he said, with the Veterans' Bureau providing paymasters. No check will be for less than $15, since 50 cents an hour will be the minimum wage, and men will work 30 hours a week. Skilled labor will be paid "not less than $1.20 an hour."

If two men of equal merits apply for the same job, the one will be hired who lives closer to the place where the work is to be done.

City CWA projects are being supervised by C. M. Reppert, chief engineer of the Department of Public Works, who expects more than 10,000 jobs to be created in Pittsburgh through the launching of the new program. Most city work, he said, will consist of playground improvement, sewage construction, and the grading of dirt streets.

E. L. Schmitt, planning engineer of Allegheny County, said CWA undertakings in the county will involve the grading and draining of county roads, the clearing of parks, and the construction of park buildings.

Work on the roads in North Park and South Park will begin Monday. Repairs of the Natrona Heights road will also start early next week. Other jobs, now filed for approval in Harrisburg, will begin as soon as the state administration sanctions them.

DEFENSE RAPS FRAUD VERDICT

Motions for a new trial and arrest of judgment were filed yesterday before Federal Judge F. P. Schoonmaker in the case of Joseph S. Gagliardino, Dominick Mastrianni and Ralph Scanga, members of election board of the First District, Third Ward. They were convicted Wednesday in Federal Court of conspiring to violate the election law.

Attorneys Sebastian C. Pugliese and R. M. McWade offered 13 reasons for a new trial, among them these statements:

"That the verdict was against the weight of evidence.

"That the court erred in excluding testimony to show that the ballots were handled by persons interested in the Democratic candidates who had an opportunity to change the marks.

"That the court erred in excluding the defendants' offer of records of Common Pleas Court showing the finding of the recount judge, W. H. Dithrich, that there was not found fraud or substantial error in the ballot box."

STOCK MARKET FACES POLICING

By WILLIAM K. HUTCHINSON
International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 2.—The returning Congress will be asked to impose direct federal control and supervision of the New York Stock Market and all other exchanges, as a result of the Senate's sensational security investigation, International News Service learned today.

The Senate Banking and Currency Committee, which probed stock market operations for a year, has decided to make this recommendation. It will urge federal control and supervision as the only means of preventing recurring losses to the investment public under conditions shown to have prevailed on the stock exchange in the Coolidge boom era.

Senator Fletcher (Dem.), of Florida, committee chairman, said:

MONEY TRUCE DENIED BY ROOSEVELT

President Prepared To Return to Washington

WARM SPRINGS, Ga., Dec. 2.—(AP.)—President Roosevelt prepared today for a departure from his "other home" here for Washington, silent and apparently satisfied with the trend of his disputed monetary program.

A revival of reports from abroad about understandings between the United States and Great Britain on money and of new proposals for stabilization of the currency in the international exchanges, brought only smiles and silence here—and no interpretations.

Today was packing-up day at the Little White House. Tomorrow the President starts for Washington, arriving there late Monday morning.

ENJOYS FREEDOM

In his two weeks here he has enjoyed perfect weather—warm and a bright sun almost every day. He also has enjoyed about as much freedom and relaxation as a President is ever able to get. Down here he has gone about without the usual curious crowds, driving his own runabout car, swimming and playing.

Incidentally he has kept close contact with national affairs over the telephone and telegraph and through his cabinet officers who called, but only urgent business was transacted and he gave particular attention to seeing to it that his government aides got some of the vacation he is enjoying.

It was a sun-tanned, rested President who prepared to turn toward Washington tomorrow.

The presidential address comes Wednesday night. It will be made to the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America and will be broadcast.

Ripley's Odditorium Closes Here Today

There's no time to lose, folks, no time to delay. Ripley's "Believe It or Not" Odditorium, that super-amazing-attraction from Chicago's Century of Progress Expotion, ends its engagement here today.

Thousands and thousands of skeptical spectators from throughout the tri-state distric have visited the Odditorium here during this week. They have entered the former Campbell department store, right in the heart of downtown at 333 Fifth avenue, in a dubious state of mind.

But the startling reality that some 25 living human oddities actually existed right up there on the especially constructed and colorful stages soon gripped them. From one end to the other of that block-long huge Odditorium, they learned that "Believe It or Not" facts as presented by Robert L. Ripley in the daily and Sunday Sun-Telegraph feature cartoon can be found.

Trained lecturers, the same who served the million and a half spectators at the World Fair, hour by hour are describing the wonders. Adults are gaining this new-found bewilderment at the admission price of 40 cents. The regular admission for children, 12 years and under, is 15 cents. But how they are flocking into the Odditorium at the special 10-cent matinee price, which was staged for their benefit from 10 a. m. until noon. The entire Sun-Telegraph share of receipts will be given to Christmas charity.

ETHEL BARRYMORE CALLS CLUB WOMEN 'KNOW NOTHINGS'

PHILADELPHIA AUDIENCE SHOCKED

Princess Steals Show As Le Gallienne Speaks

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 2.—(AP.)—It was "an extra added attraction," but Ethel Barrymore's denunciation of 300 Philadelphia clubwomen as know-nothings stole the show from her erstwhile protege, Eva Le Gallienne, and evoked a stor mof protest.

The two famous actresses created their sensation—as full of drama as any of their theatrical triumphs—at the Philadelphia Lecture Assembly, where Miss Le Gallienne appeared yesterday to "make amends" for her failure to keep an engagement last Monday.

Explaining her failure as the result of a "complete misunderstanding," her "apology" was such that it set the stage for Miss Barrymore, princess of the American theater's "royal family."

Miss Barrymore, already smarting under the lash of her companion's criticism, told the women:

"I don't know why we bother to speak to you. Miss Le Gallienne and I do you an honor to be here at all.

"You don't know anything. You don't understand anything. You don't appreciate anything. You never have known anything and never will.

"I have given 35 years of my life to the theater. I don't know why we do it. We get no thanks. I think Miss Le Gallienne has done you a great honor. I don't know why. I don't know why anyone should honor you. You do not come to see my plays. You should be happy to come here two or three times in order to hear Miss Le Gallienne once!"

Turning to Miss Le Gallienne she continued:

"I found this child. She has done more for the American theater than anyone else in the world. And yet you dare criticize her, a woman of her intelligence, because she doesn't appear at some meeting or other that she doesn't know anything about!"

The fire died from her eyes a moment, and she smiled and said:

"My grandmother had a theater here in Philadelphia, when people still had manners. Yes, it's been written about in books. But then, you wouldn't know anything about that. It doesn't matter. What's the difference?"

Although mild by comparison, Miss Le Gallienne's criticism of the audience was no less pointed. Asserting she had never broken a professional engagement in her more than 20 years in the theater, she exclaimed:

"I would think by this time you would have a little faith."

Her scheduled lecture concerned her plans for a national repertory theater, possibly with federal financial aid. Then she introduced Miss Barrymore as "a great treat for you."

After the meeting Mrs. Arthur Waters, chairman, called Miss Barrymore's criticism "the greatest insult a Philadelphia audience ever had." She said, however, she believed Miss Le Gallienne was "completely justified."

HUNTERS AFIELD 2ND DAY; 3 DEAD

With the kill of deer reported below normal, because of the unseasonable weather, Pennsylvania hunters today opened the second day of the 15-day big game season.

Three deaths were reported and many hunters injured by stray shot.

The game commission estimated that more than 500,000 hunters were in the woods on the opening day.

One of the first fatalities was Clair Powell, 19, of Mount Pleasant Mills, killed by a discharge from his own shotgun.

A bullet from his brother's gun killed Anthony Machak, 26, of Cluen, Indiana County.

Ben Davidson, 35, of Nanty-Glo, was killed by a bullet from a companion's rifle which he was demonstrating.

The list of hunting accidents since the hunting season began November 1 totals more than a score.

Lashes 300 Clubwomen

ETHEL BARRYMORE . . . SHE SPOKE PLAINLY TO AUDIENCE

TWO FACE QUIZ IN SLAYING

Two men were held in the county jail today for questioning in connection with the fatal beating Wednesday of Andrew Andrejcka, 42, a roomer at 303 Ella street, McKees Rocks. They are Frank Zaminski, 23, and Bennie Hendrick, 28, both of McKees Rocks.

Three men, posing as McKees Rocks policemen, entered Andrejcka's room and fractured his skull with a blackjack and jimmy.

The suspects were arrested after McKees Rocks police and detectives learned Zaminski's wife, Annie, 24, a daughter of Mrs. Mary Mehal, in whose house Andrejcka lived, told her husband the man had insulted her and slapped her face two weeks ago.

Mrs. Mehal also was to be questioned at county detective headquarters.

'DOUBLE SHIFT' WIFE FORGIVEN

CHICAGO, Dec. 2.—(AP.)—Apparently relenting, Saint S. Millard, cafe owner, slipped a roll of bills into the hand and planted a kiss on the brow of 19-year-old Rita Gentry Bishop Millard, whom he accused of bigamy and being a "double-shift wife."

Then he left her in her jail cell and went before a judge, asking that nothing be done until Monday when Rita might be able to appear with a lawyer. The judge agreed.

Millard on Thursday became suspicious of his wife's absence. He went to her relatives and tangled in a fight with Rita's brother, Irving, and a friend, Thomas Moran. Then, Millard said, he discovered Rita had married Carl Bishop, 22, a window trimmer, in September.

Bishop worked days, Millard said, whereas he worked nights. Police said Rita admitted marrying both men, but declared it was "just a family affair."

SWARTZ FREED ON BOND

Irvin (Iggie) Swartz, indicted in the killing of Andy Garavini, downtown hacker, was out of jail today on a $5,000 bond authorized last night by Judge Elder W. Marshall.

The bond was opposed by District Attorney Andrew T. Park, who maintained Swartz might still be held on a first-degree murder indictment. Several hours later, however, Judge Marshall gave authority for the bond to M. Barney Cohen, one of Park's assistants.

Cohen recommended the action after studying testimony before the coroner's jury, which charged Swartz with manslaughter.

Harry Silverman, the bondsman, pledged his property at 4308-4324 Penn avenue.

GIRL BELIEVED BURIED ALIVE

COATESVILLE, Pa., Dec. 2.—(AP.)—A grim possibility that one of two girls, believed slain to hide their knowledge of another underworld killing, may have been buried alive is expressed by Dr. Michael Margolis, coroner's physician.

Testifying at the inquest into the deaths of Ethel Greentree, also known as Ethel Marshall, and her companion, Florence Miller, whose bodies were unearthed in a cornfield near Brandywine Manor three days ago, Dr. Margolis said Miss Greentree had been shot seven times. He explained:

"The girl died of internal hemorrhages. She lived about two hours after she was shot and if the shooting took place near Brandywine Manor, she probably was buried alive."

The two disappeared the night of November 1, shortly after Edward (Cowboy) Wallace and John Zukovsky were lured from a Camden hotel, where they had been registered with the women, and shot by gangsters. Wallace was killed, but Zukovsky lived to name his assailants.

Investigators said they were convinced the women were slain to "seal their lips" because they knew the slayers of Wallace. They were last seen getting into an automobile the night of his death while on their way to a hospital to visit Zukovsky.

DENY WYNEKOOP BAIL TO 'PROBE' MURDER

Learn Dashing Earle Cataloged His Love Affairs

International News Service.

CHICAGO, Dec. 2.—Showing plainly his disappointment at not winning release on bond, Earle Wynekoop today paced his cell in the county jail, where he is held on a warrant charging him as an accessory in the operating table murder of his auburn-haired young wife, Rheta.

The dashing young widower, who had kept a cataloged list of his 50 or more extra-marital loves, had planned, if released, to conduct an independent investigation for clues in the murder of his wife at the 16-room Wynekoop mansion.

Two courts refused to grant his outright release or freedom on bond, and as a result Wynekoop must remain in the county jail for another 10 days. His case was continued until December 11.

In another wing of the county jail Dr. Alice Lindsay Wynekoop, noted 62-year-old physician, is being held pending her arraignment on an indictment for murder in the strange death of her daughter-in-law. Jail physicians reported Dr. Wynekoop to be gaining strength after her breakdown earlier in the week.

PETITION WITHDRAWN

Due to the condition of Dr. Wynekoop's health a habeas corpus petition filed in her behalf was withdrawn on the suggestion of Judge Joseph David, and she will remain in the county jail to recover strength.

An indictment was returned against the doctor by the grand jury on the basis of her strange confession that she had shot her dead daughter-in-law in the back as Rheta lay nearly nude on the operating table in the Wynekoop home. The bullet was fired, the aged doctor said, only after an overdose of chloroform had proved fatal to the girl.

Authorities have possession of a notebook kept by Rheta's philandering husband in which he had recorded in code the mental and physical qualities of girls he had met and "dated" while working as a guard at the World's Fair this summer.

CODE OF HIS OWN

The code consisted of numerals running from 1 to 10 which he placed after the girls' names in his diary.

The numerals and their significance follow:

1—Cashier at the World's Fair, where he worked through the summer and met many of his flames. 2—Blonde. 3—Brunet. 4—Pretty. 5—Fair (met at the World's Fair). 6—Wealthy. 7—Warm. 8—Red (hair or hot?) 9—Exhibit (worked at a World's Fair exhibit, rather than as a cashier). 10—Sentimental.

Miss Florence Conley, 20, who was given the highest rating of three girls listed in the fragmentary memorandum, said she was small, fair, blonde, weighs about 105 pounds, lives at home with her family, and worked at the Electrical Building at the fair. She was told:

"Following your name, Earle had the numbers 2-4-9-10, which, according to the code, stand for blonde, pretty, exhibit worker and sentimental... Does that fit?"

Miss Conley replied:

"I guess so, all except the last. I am not so sentimental."

She admitted that Earle's "mild" love making included one proposal of marriage, which she refused. She was asked:

"Did he mention his wife?"

And her reply:

"No, I never knew he was married until I read about her death."

RHETA'S DIARY

Rheta's diary of the week leading up to her marriage, August 31, 1929, was also made public, but was found to be only a simple chronicle of everyday life in her home town of Indianapolis and of her trip here for the wedding.

Earle appeared first in the felony court of Judge Schiller, where charges of accessory before the fact of the murder were continued until December 11, despite a fight by John Horan, partner of his attorney, Frank Tyrrell, to obtain his freedom.

In Judge David's court, Earle's motion for release on bail also was continued until December 11.

'Crudest' Gallows Hangs Last Man

CANON CITY, Col., Dec. 2.—(AP.)—Walter Jones, of Flint Mich., was hanged at the State Penitentiary here last night for the slaying of Hartford Johnson a fellow transient, in a boxcar near Palisade, Col., in October, 1932.

The Michigan youth was the last man to be hanged in the Colorado "death machine," which penal authorities have called one of the crudest in the United States. A 500-pound weight is dropped to jerk the victim into the air by a rope and pullies. By an act of the last Legislature the hanging machine will be replaced by a lethal gas chamber.

The Story of David -:- CHAPTER V -:- Told in Pictures by Dan Smith

But David put aside the armor Saul had given him and went out to meet Goliath, carrying only a sling and five smooth stones. And Goliath said, "Am I a dog, that thou comest to me with staves?"

And David answered Goliath, saying, "I come to thee in the name of the Lord of hosts, the God of the armies of Israel, whom thou hast defied." Then David took a stone and slang it at Goliath, the Philistine.

And the smooth stone from the brook that David hurled with his sling smote Goliath in his forehead, and the stone sunk into his forehead, and thereupon Goliath fell upon his face to the earth. Then David, who had no sword, ran forward and stood upon the fallen Philistine, and he drew Goliath's great sword out of its sheath, and with it he slew Goliath and cut off his head. And the armies of the Philistines fled.

Born in Washington, January 18, 1901, son of Charles S. and Carlotta Brockett Muir, and grandson of the late Rev. J. J. Muir, a former chaplain of the United States Senate, the Rev. Muir's ancestry in this country dates back to early Colonial times.

He attended Chevy Chase Elementary School, graduated from the McKinley Technical High School in 1918 and studied mechanical engineering at Carnegie Institute of Technology in 1918. After two years he decided to enter the ministry and finished his college work at Washington and Jefferson College in 1922.

Attended Church As Student in 1918 At Tech

He completed his theological studies at Western Theological Seminary, North Side, in 1925 and the same year he assisted the Rev. Dr. Hugh T. Kerr at Shadyside Presbyterian Church, where he was ordained by the Presbytery of Pittsburgh, June 19, 1925.

He was special representative of the Board of National Missions in Home Mission work in the province of Saskatchewan, Canada, during the summer of 1926. From there he went to St. Paul, Minn., to become assistant pastor at the House of Hope Presbyterian Church with the late Rev. Dr. H. C. Swearengen.

A year later he became pastor of the First Presbyterian Church, Van Wert, O., and remained there until last month when he accepted a call to the Bellefield Presbyterian Church in Pittsburgh.

The Rev. Muir is married and has a son, James.

PARKER TAKING MISSIONARY SEA TRIP

Seth Parker, sage of Jonesport, Me., is forsaking his Sunday evening services for a missionary trip around the world. The screen, stage and radio star, who has developed a common religion for all his radio listeners, will sail from Portland, Me., December 5 for a two-year cruise into strange and seldom visited nooks of the world.

For 13 weeks, while he is sailing down the coast to Miami, Fla., he will put into major cities along the sea coast and broadcast every Tuesday night, telling of the adventures and philosophies of seafaring men and narrating sea stories of the ports he happens to visit.

Seth Parker is Capt. Phillips Lord in real life. He is the son of a Congregational minister, the Rev. A. J. Lord, of Meriden, Conn. Five and a half years ago he originated the character of Seth Parker, which now holds a record for the longest sustaining program of radio.

A group of young people from Westminster Presbyterian Church, Greensburg, will present a Seth Parker program in the Second Presbyterian Church, Eighth street, Pittsburgh, tomorrow evening, headed by their pastor, the Rev. William Owen.

Henry Ford To Speak on Radio

By AIRCASTER

For more than five years recurrent rumors have had Henry Ford sponsoring a radio program.

Following each rumor there has come the same old reiteration that Ford is not airminded; that he doesn't believe a suitable radio program can be built for him, and that if he ever did decide to go radio, he would buy an entire day each week.

But Henry Ford is going to sponsor his first program Saturday, December 9, and will follow it up with another December 12. Both will be aired via CBS.

On those occasions, the Detroit gentleman will be interviewed, at his own expense, by D. Thomas Curtin, and the events will mark the fortieth anniversary of Henry's horseless carriage.

It is further reported that when another 40 years have elapsed, Henry will consider a regular radio series.

(No—"Lum and Abner" are not sponsored by Mr. Ford, but by Ford dealers.)

Bottle Opener

Pennsylvania, Ohio and Utah are contending states in a race to find an eternal niche in American history. Each would like to own the distinction of being the thirty-sixth state to ratify prohibition repeal, and since each of them will ratify on December 5, it becomes guesswork to indicate which really will give the pendulum its final swing.

CBS intends broadcasting the ratification by the thirty-sixth state. To make sure it will have a microphone set-up in the proper place, the Columbia system has been forced to place paraphernalia in the state houses at Harrisburg, Salt Lake City and Columbus.

Pennsylvania's Legislature goes into a huddle at noon, and the other states some time after 1 p. m. on the historic date.

Globe-Trotting

By LOUIS I. KAUFMAN

Hello, ladies and gentlemen:

Here's a few more Believe It or Nots sent in by the globe trotters. Mrs. Sam Cohen, Woodwell street, has ossified oranges, oranges that have turned to stone. They've been that way for 15 years, so it looks like they'll never make orange juice now.

Mrs. Jacob Kronz owns a dog, Bonnie Bell, that never misses the globe trotting on the radio.

Someone says that a storekeeper on Frankstown avenue in the 6300 block has a chicken with three legs.

And here's Paul Blake, McKeesport, whose 5-month-old bunny hasn't any ears, never had any.

Mrs. Ballinger has written about little 5-year-old Gloria. Of all the things that have come over the radio nothing has caused her eyes to sparkle like Honeysuckle, the big baby doll, crying mama. Tell Gloria, Mrs. Ballinger, that if she'll listen we'll have Honeysuckle back on the radio next week and make her talk especially for Gloria.

Mrs. S.—In some cases it is a very simple matter to trace a bank account even after many years. Will you give me further information?

Doctor's Poison Plot Foiled

An absorbing drama of a young doctor's plot to murder his sweetheart by means of typhoid germs—a hospital's efforts to discover the cause of the girl's illness, and another doctor's discovery of the deadly scheme—is heard over the radio this evening.

A presentation of the American Weekly, big feature magazine distributed with tomorrow's Sun-Telegraph, the drama, "A Doctor's Love," is scheduled as follows: WWVA, Wheeling, 5:45 p. m.; WMMN, Fairmont, 7 p. m. and WCAE, 7:45 p. m.

Operator 13 by ROBERT W. CHAMBERS

What Has Gone Before

The Union cavalry generals complained bitterly that they could not surprise their brave and alert enemies, Jeb Stuart and Fitzhugh Lee. Col. Sharpe, head of the Federal Secret Service, told them it was because of the activities of a girl Confederate spy, Antonia Ford, whose ancestral home was at Culpeper.

Clever, bold and resourceful, Miss Ford was a vital link in Gen. Stuart's chain of spies. So, Col. Sharpe sent beautiful Gail Loveless, Operator 13 in the Federal Secret Service, to Culpeper. Operator 13, an accomplished actress and a daring and successful spy, went to Culpeper and actually became the house guest of Antonia Ford. Her instructions were to checkmate the other girl's efforts and, if opportunity presented, to surrender her to the Union Army for punishment.

Gail Loveless, for her part, was certain to be hanged if the Confederates discovered her identity. Following a cavalry review, a party of Confederate officers came to the house for a midday dinner. One of them was Capt. Jack Gailliard. Gail began to tease him about his reputed conquests, but suddenly he threw her into confusion by calmly announcing that he loved her.

Now Go On With the Story

Girl Spy, Aghast, Hears Gailliard's Love Confession

(Republished from Cosmopolitan Magazine and soon to appear on the screen as a Cosmopolitan production made for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and starring Marion Davies).

By ROBERT W. CHAMBERS

At that a swift color flooded her face. There was a tremulous little laugh, "How gallant and daring you really are, Capt. Gailliard! Suppose I should take your declaration seriously — how could you flounder out of it?"

"I am deadly earnest, ma'am."

She affected to laugh merrily. "I'm in deadly earnest, too," she said gaily, "when I command you to tell me about the most exciting adventure in your military career."

"This very moment is the most dangerous," he repeated boldly.

She pretended consternation. "Are we really in danger in Culpeper?"

"I am, Miss Loveless."

At that she laughed. 'You are determined to pay your compliments recklessly, Capt. Gailliard. Of which of my weapons are you particularly afraid?'

"Of your eyes, ma'am."

"Are you a burnt child, sir?"

"Ma'am?"

"Have other eyes resembling mine taught you fear?"

Again the hot color stained his face.

"You haven't yet told me about the really most dangerous moment of your life, Capt. Gailliard," she reminded him.

"This is that moment, ma'am," he insisted. "No armed Yankee could scare me as your beauty does. You are bristling with deadly weapons—your eyes, your lips, your hair, ma'am—and the terrifying loveliness of your—"

Frightened Now

"Please, Capt. Gailliard," she protested. She had not bargained for this. And now, striving to laugh at him, she saw that the boy was terribly in earnest.

"In these days," he said, "we live a whole lifetime in an hour. I—I hope I am not offending you when I say—"

"Don't say it," she whispered.

Maj. Blythe was on his feet, now, amid cheering and the flutter of beating hands—the first sentiment with brimming glasses: "Our Country — the Confederate States of America."

When the fierce, gay din had subsided a little, "The Ladies!" followed; then "The President"; then "General Robert E. Lee!" Amid the cheering the doors of the great room were flung open, and Jeb Stuart and John Pelham came in, red sashed, gold laced and clanking.

Then the tumult grew to a whirlwind of cheering; men and women sprang to their feet, with lifted glasses.

When her turn came, Operator 13 made her curtsy to General J. E. B. Stuart and had her slender hand kissed by the blue-eyed, golden-bearded god. And then, threading the happy confusion, she made her way to the stairway, and to her chamber. And dropped upon a chair to rest and try to think.

For a little, yet, the cold fright of her perilous situation chilled her. Then, as always, her young blood suddenly flowed warmly once more. And once more the very charm of her danger gripped and held her in its all-embracing fascination.

She rose lightly, lowered the window shade. Then she bolted her door, pulled up her billowy skirts, drew from its belt around her waist a long thin knife and unscrewed the handle, which was hollow. Here was a crow-quill pen as thin as a hairpin, and a tiny phial full of colorless liquid and a few sheets of jeweler's tissue.

No writing appeared as her pen flew, tracing invisible characters almost microscopic in dimensions. She detailed the events of the day, the numbers and conditions of Fitz Lee's regiments and horse artillery, their strength, their position.

Detailed Report

She reported the arrival of Stuart and Pelham on court-martial duty. She wrote that Antonia Ford had not yet attempted to communicate with any rebel spy inside the Union lines, but that she might try to do so now, because Capt. Gailliard had arrived in Culpeper.

No more cavalry had come, she reported, and only Fitz Lee's brigade occupied Culpeper; and she assured Col. Sharpe that her news was reliable.

When she finished she replaced pen, phial and tissue in her dagger's hilt and slipped the blade into its velvet sheath once more. The sheet of tissue she rolled into a tiny cylinder, took a tortoise shell side comb from her curly hair, unscrewed one tine, which was hollow, placed the cylinder in it, and replaced the comb before the mirror.

A faint, aromatic, citrus odor remained in the room. She let the window shade slide up, and the sunny breeze dissipated it. Now she was ready to go downstairs and mingle with the others who had scattered about the grounds to enjoy the pale sunshine of earliest spring.

There still remained patches of soft snow on the northern slopes of roads and woodlands. On the veranda steps, in the sun, a picturesque group of young girls and junior officers in faded gray gossiped and laughed She could see cavalry horses picketed along the low stone wall west of the stables and troops of the escort lounging there.

Earnest Conversation

In the summer house Joe Sweeney picked dreamily on his banjo in sentimental accompaniment to the inevitable "Lorena," sung in a low voice by a girl from Charleston. On a wrought-iron settee Antonia Ford sat with Jeb Stuart in low-voiced conversation. She held a cluster of pale yellow crocuses in her hand.

Gail Loveless lingered a little while to listen to and join with the gossipers on the veranda steps. She did not see Jack Gailliard there. Nor was John Pelham visible. Miss Shackleford, also, was missing. The Charleston girl and Joe Sweeney had taken up "Ashby."

"Dream, oh dream of laurels won
On Virginia's battlefields,
Of the work forever done,
Still we stand here proud and free—
Slaves and bondmen but for thee!
Ashby's men shall ever be
Our defense and shield!"

But Turner Ashby and his white battle horse were dead, and now the blue-eyed, golden-bearded Stuart led Ashby's men. There he sat over yonder whispering secrets into a little, ivory ear. And Operator 13 could only look at him across the croquet grounds and wonder what he was whispering to Antonia Ford.

And wonder, unquietly, where Capt. Gailliard had gone and what he might be doing. And wonder, also, how soon she might venture to saunter toward the boxwood garden, and, from there, slip away into the oak woods and follow a winding path along a stream, until she arrived at her occult destination.

She stole onward, walking on the grass to avoid the dry leaves.

But here, along the pond's edge, paced Capt. John Gailliard, booted and spurred in his faded gray, while his saddled nag straying at will, munched the tender grass. It was too late to draw back; he had seen her.

"What a solitary young gentleman,' she said amiably, as he came striding across the meadow to confront her with a bow. "I thought, perhaps, you might be waiting for me on the veranda.'

"I shall wait for you all my life, ma'am,' he burst out impetuously.

"Please Capt. Gailliard!"

"For God's sake, let me go on, Miss Gail."

"Wait!" He looked up at her, dumbly. She said: "I hear that you are celebrated for your sentimental affairs, Capt. Gailliard. And now I am inclined to believe that you really are the gayly reckless beau that people say you are. Please rise and defend yourself."

He got up, red, inarticulate, his hurt eyes fixed on her.

"They say you are a very head-strong young man with a record for careless courtships and heedless heart affairs," she said. "I don't believe you know what it is to be really in love."

"Ma'am," he said huskily, "I do know, now, what it means to fall in love. I know I should have asked permission to court you. But in these days, ma'am, love comes in the morning, and death in the afternoon . . . I know I should have waited to address your parents, Miss Loveless. But you looked at me and love blazed up. And I do not know how long God means to let me live. Any man who leads my life could tell you very honestly that it is not worth 10 cents' insurance."

"Why? You are a soldier. Are you anything else, Captain Gailliard?"

"I haven't even the chance of a soldier, ma'am," he said simply

"Do you mean that your business in more dangerous than a soldier's?"

"Perhaps not. We all do the best we can for our country. But would you let me go away with a little mite of hope?"

All Life in a Day

"You mean, will I consent to add another triumph to your long list of sentimental experiences? No, I won't." But Miss Loveless laughed uncertainly as she said it. "Maybe you wouldn't remain in love with me if you knew more about me."

The passionate avowal that burst from the boy silenced and frightened her a little; and to her hot consternation he caught her to him in an embrace of steel. "There w-was one other g-girl," he stuttered. "I reckon I'm plumb crazy, but there is something of her in you—though I must be mad to say it!"

Dangerous Mission Of Young Man Alarms Gail

"Who w-was she?" stammered Operator 13, placing both hands against him to keep him away. But her imprisoned body was yielding and he drew her closer till their lips touched.

"All a lifetime in a day," he whispered fiercely — "love and death within the hour. Gail, will you love me?"

Their lips clung a moment; then she wrenched herself free and covered her face with trembling hands.

He said: "My orders are coming. I must go."

In tearful silence the girl came to him. "For God's sake, be careful," she whispered.

"There will be little danger, I think."

"This is an awful thing it does to us," she whimpered.

"Ask your parents if we may be engaged," he said excitedly. "Write and tell me, Miss Gail. A letter to Jeb Stuart's headquarters will always find me. But where should a letter go to you, ma'am. To Blythedale House?"

"No. Write to me in care of the Baltimore Postoffice, ge-general d-delivery," she sobbed. "But—where—where are you going, now? Please tell me."

"I can't. Goodby," he looked at his watch, then gathered her close and kissed and kissed her "They'll be here in five minutes, and you must not be seen with me. Goodby, Miss Gail, ma'am. Darling—darling. Honeysweet!"

When she had walked a little way on into the oak woods along the stream she turned around to see what he was about. And saw what she expected to see—Antonia Ford on horseback, talking eagerly to the man to whom she had just pledged herself. Then she saw him take something from Miss Ford, vault gayly into his saddle; saw them ride away together and disappear.

JUNIOR PATROL

Yesterday a noted man died, fellows!

The entire city of Pittsburgh mourns the death of R. B. Mellon, who made many contributions to the welfare and greatness of his city, state and nation.

In many ways his career should be an inspiration for any fellow. He worked hard, he did much good, he was honest and fearless. We all hope that the world may be able to say as much for us all.

Here's a letter today from John Russell, of 401 Stanton avenue, Millvale. He says:

"Please enroll me in the Junior Patrol. I have just gotten over having chickenpox, but now I am back at school and am feeling fine. I am waiting anxiously for my membership card and emblem. I have a little brother who is going to be four years old and he wants to join, too. He hears me talking about the Junior Patrol and he wants to know if he can join."

He surely can, John—just send in his pledge filled out the same way you filled out yours and it won't be long before he will get his card and badge. Have you noticed how even Butch is a member of Juniors' patrol now? He didn't seem such a good fellow at first, but he just needed somebody like Junior to start him off on the right track. We are glad you are well and in school again.

Ruth Hudak, of 145 Butler street, Etna, sends in six pledges and now all she needs is four more members to have a full sized Junior Patrol.

And Rosella Hribal, of R. D. No. 6, Washington, Pa., writes this note. She is a new member, too:

"I like the funnies and wish there were more of them."

We're glad you do, Rosella. Maybe you could start a Junior Patrol in your neighborhood, and have more fun than ever.

RECIPES SUGGEST EASY DISHES

Now that Thanksgiving is definitely a thing of the past, housewives, at least for a few days, will want to avoid all dishes that entail hours of preparation before they are ready to be served.

By consulting Prudence Penny's prize recipes, they will be able to prepare tasty, yet simply made foods. One very sensible suggestion at this time is Mrs. Elwell's combination casserole. Also very practical is Mrs. Jones' method of preparing Dartmouth potatoes.

Keep sending in your recipes to Prudence Penny, Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph, so that you, too, may have an opportunity to win the $5 prize or one of the 10 $1 prizes awarded every day to the best recipes received.

Since such a large number of women are taking part in the contest, Prudence Penny wants everyone to remember that absolutely no recipes will be returned.

Ball Nets $4,000

Late yesterday afternoon when the Cinderella ball committee, chairmaned by young Mrs. W. W. Blair, Jr., checked upon receipts from the ball, the members found to their amazement that they had taken in all of $4,000. And they expect a final check-up will add a hundred or so more.

Not until late yesterday did the committee have any notion they had done so well. This amount is much more than any other Cinderella Ball has netted. Of course expenses, such as the orchestra, have to come out of the sum. But St. Margaret's Hospital will receive the largest amount this year so far from this annual ball.

The swagger little suit to the left in the sketch is natural color cloth with a bright silk blouse and a man-tailored air.

Checked tweeds in soft shades make long coated suits like the model sketched right in the illustration. The bias strip at the closing is very new and smart, and it details the coat into one that may be borrowed for general utility service.

CRUISE clothes for the next month or so will interest all the girls who save up their vacations for winter, letting week-ends take care of their summer leisure. More than ever this year cruises over the week-end will be popular, because so many pople have an NRA day of rest tacked on to their regular Sunday time off. There are lots of trips that can be undertaken on a Friday night, and brought safely back to the home port by Monday forenoon.

The nice part about clothes that one buys for shipboard just now is that they become perfect fill-ins for a Southern wardrobe, or for the balmy days up No'th when the thermometer has a fit out of season.

For it's tweeds, in suits and in top coats; knitted frocks of light woolen and heavy silk, and so on that travel on water so well.

* * *

EVERYONE should remember that one usually dresses in a semi-formal getup for dinner on a cruise. It is important to have along a frock which looks festive, and which is made of some fabric that will not give up the ghost when it is walked or parked on the deck between dances.

Those blistered satins and the heavily corded silks are fairly seaworthy, among the newer fabrics, and any roughish or crinkly crepe is a natural tar.

Colors don't matter so much, except for the girl who gets very red in the face when she stamps out in wind and weather all day, or the one who always feels "squeamish" at sea, and gets pale to prove it. A gown of soft, delicate color will tame down girls of the first ilk, of course, and those in the second group should avoid black and ice shades, choosing rosy, clear tints to help themselves along.

* * *

BUT unless a woman has warm, smart costumes to enjoy all day on shipboard, no amount of titivation at night will mark her as a well-dressed woman. Just the right sporty shoes, snug hats that one can relax in with a steamer chair, and good looking gloves are all important daytime accessories.

Mrs. Bowman Addresses Friday Morning Club, Luncheon Meeting

By MRS. CHARLES M. BREGG

Ida Wright Bowman, the most popular speaker in the Friday Morning Club course, made two speeches yesterday, one, her scheduled current events discussion before the club in Carnegie Music Hall, and the other a brief but equally fine talk to the little group gathered at luncheon afterward in the Hotel Schenley.

This second audience included a number of school teacher Voters' League members who, on account of the holiday, were able to attend their only Friday Morning Club lecture of the year. And it was to them Mrs. Bowman especially directed her second talk on (of all things) the new knees of automobiles. From that she went on to talk of training children to become shock absorbers instead of shock transmitters—of training them how to maintain balance and keep in adjustment especially under stress.

It's about time the professors had their innings, Mrs. Bowman observed at her "official" talk in the Music Hall, when she was speaking of the professors with whom President Roosevelt has surrounded himself. Trained brains are an asset any time anywhere, Mrs. Bowman said.

She takes as a healthy sign the wave of criticism sweeping the country at present, for, she said, until recently everybody has been too frightened to raise any voice. She predicted that the "war of the professors" will be as nothing compared to what is to come when Congress convenes in January.

She talked of Sprague's resignation, the gold question, the Cuban revolution, political crises in Europe closely touching this country, Russian recognition and the Litvinoff-Mussolini conference, among other subjects, on all of which she voiced her usual sane, just views.

Just before the question period, Mrs. J. O. Miller, who presided in Mrs. R. Templeton Smith's absence, urged the women to contact their legislators urging the passage of the Harris permanent registration bill and an appropriation for schools.

TELL IT TO ELSIE -:- -:- Follow This Unusual Feature Day by Day -:- -:- By ELSIE ROBINSON

Mistakes of the Past Help Build Sounder Future

Should straying husbands be given another chance?
Or, is a man who has made one mistake spoiled for good?
And suppose he were your man—what would you do?
A heart-broken woman is asking.

Dear Miss Robinson:

I am going through a terrible time of trouble, and I wonder if you can help me decide what to do.

I have been married for eight years. I trusted my husband. I loved him deeply. I still love him, in spite of the terrible thing that he has done.

For about six months I have noticed a difference in him. He became moody and irritable, and went out a good deal. But I thought nothing of that, because I knew his business affairs were not going very well, and I thought he was just worried about that.

I tried to be as understanding and sympathetic as I could, but that just seemed to make him more moody than ever.

Yet I was not prepared for the shock that I got when he came to me and told me that he had been having an affair with another woman—a very attractive, glamorous widow, who had come here from another city.

He confessed to me that she had dazzled him, and that for several months he thought he was in love with her. He had even thought of asking me for a divorce, and he had been away with her on two week-end trips.

WORRIED ABOUT FUTURE

That is ended now, he says. He insists that, as he knew her better, he found she was not the sweet, abused little thing she had first made him think she was, but that she was bad-tempered and greedy, and now he never wants to see her again. He swears now that he realizes that he loves only me, and that he wanted to confess to me and start all over again "with a clean slate."

But can we start over again? Can we ever rebuild what we once had? Can I ever trust him again? I love him, but when I think of it all I am so angry and hurt that I don't know what to do. I have been terribly disillusioned. No one knows how hurt I have been. And it seems to me so unfair! Men seem to expect to do things like that, and then get off scot free.

Please help me. I can, in a way, understand what happened to him. I can even excuse him for it—but can I ever forget?

Oh, what shall I do? Shall I try to give him "another chance." as he asks. Or will this thing always come between us?

ALICE.

Can we "start all over again?"

No. We can't do that, Alice. We can't do it with our husbands or wives. We can't even do it with ourselves.

Life never starts all over again. The dead yesterdays can never be buried completely out of sight. The foolish, faithless things we've done can never be entirely forgotten.

But does that mean, then, that you shouldn't forgive your husband and go on with him?

SHOULD FORGIVE

Indeed it doesn't! If "life doesn't start all over again," she does something very much better. She uses all of yesterday's wreckage of mistakes to build a better, sounder tomorrow.

And you can do the same. You and your husband can't be the care-free lovers you were before you were married. You couldn't have remained such lovers, anyway.

But you can be wiser, sweeter, closer, more generous comrades than you ever were before—if you have the good sense, generosity and courage to take this incident as part of your man's life experience, and if you treat him as you'd want him to treat you, if you had made a terrible mistake.

For you would want him to forgive you if you'd slipped, wouldn't you? You would need him more than you had ever needed him before. And you'd long to have him take you in his arms and say—"Darling, we're none of us perfect. Maybe making mistakes is just as much part of growing up as making good. At any rate, I love you and I'm going to stick by you, always!"

You'd want him to say that to you, wouldn't you?

Then say it to him!

Contract Bridge -:- HOW TO PLAY and HOW TO WIN

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

Aggressive Hands

Some so-called Bridge authorities attempt to classify the hands one picks up at the Bridge table as being either "aggressive" or "defensive." Naturally if a player picks up a hand containing not distributional values—that is, no suit of more than four cards in length and a trick-taking power limited to the honor cards or honor combinations it may contain—he knows that he cannot go far from the standpoint of attack and also knows that the prospect of the Aces and Kings he holds being good for tricks against an adverse bid is increased by the shortness of his suits, provided some other hand around the table is not a distributional monstrosity.

However, to lay too much stress upon whether the hand is "aggressive" or "defensive" is a mistake in the first round of bidding. It is true that the Opening bid is a leap in the dark and that the bidder is seeking to give his partner information without any knowledge of definite values held by the players yet to speak. Thus it is true that any minimum Opening bid is likely to be doubled by an opponent and possibly defeated decisively, but the importance of taking the aggressive when holding more than the average share of honor strength is too great to suggest a timorous policy under these circumstances.

Recently in New York City a team-of-four match was held in which one of the teams was using the Culbertson System while the other team was pledged to another system, which distinguishes between aggressive and defensive types of hands. One of the hands dealt was the hand below:

North, Dealer.
East and West vulnerable.

♠K 7
♡10 4 3
♢A Q 10 7 6 2
♣K 4

♠Q 9 4 2
♡8 5
♢K 9 5
♣Q 8 7 5

North
West East
South

♠J 10 6 5 3
♡7 6
♢J 4
♣10 9 6 2

♠A 8
♡A K Q J 9 2
♢8 3
♣A J 3

At the table where the Culbertson players held the North and South hands the bidding went as follows:

North	East	South	West
1 ♢ (1)	Pass	2 ♡	Pass
3 ♢	Pass	5 N T (2)	Pass
6 ♢	Pass	6 ♡	Pass
Pass	Pass

1—A sound bid, in view of the length of the diamonds.

2—The five-notrump convention, showing three Aces and the King of a bid suit.

West opened with the two of spades, which was captured by the Ace in the closed hand in order to conserve Dummy's entry. Trumps were then cleared, and when the diamond finesse held and low-card tricks in that suit were established, the hand was spread for seven.

The opposing players, who drew a clear line of demarcation between aggressive and defensive hands, were content with the bidding below:

North	East	South	West
Pass (1)	Pass	1 ♡	Pass
2 ♢	Pass	3 ♡ (2)	Pass
4 ♡ (3)	Pass	Pass	Pass

1—The length of the diamond suit, according to North, would not justify an Opening on less than three honor-tricks, especially with both major suits open.

2—Diamonds don't fit with South's hand, and he has no special desire to play it at notrump. A Force in hearts is his only course.

3—North still does not see a Slam. South may have the Ace, King and Queen of hearts, or even 100 honors, to six or seven cards, plus the Ace of spades, and lose the Ace of clubs and the King of diamonds—possibly two tricks in clubs if the Queen sits wrong. The bidding is consequently closed out.

Naturally the same Opening was made, and the same number of tricks were taken, but due to an unfortunate bidding system the correct contract was not reached.

TODAY'S QUESTION

The bidding:

North	South
1 N T	2 N T
3 N T	Pass

You, East, hold:

♠K J 9 5 2 ♡K 10 4 ♢9 8 ♣7 6 5

What do you lead?

Answer—The spade five. The fourth-best card of your longest and strongest suit is in order despite the tenace holding. Your spade suit is of five-card length and you have a probable card of re-entry. Neither short-suit Opening is desirable when you have definite attacking possibilities of your own.

Household Hints

Vinegar, to which some salt has been added, will quickly remove stains from china and earthenware.

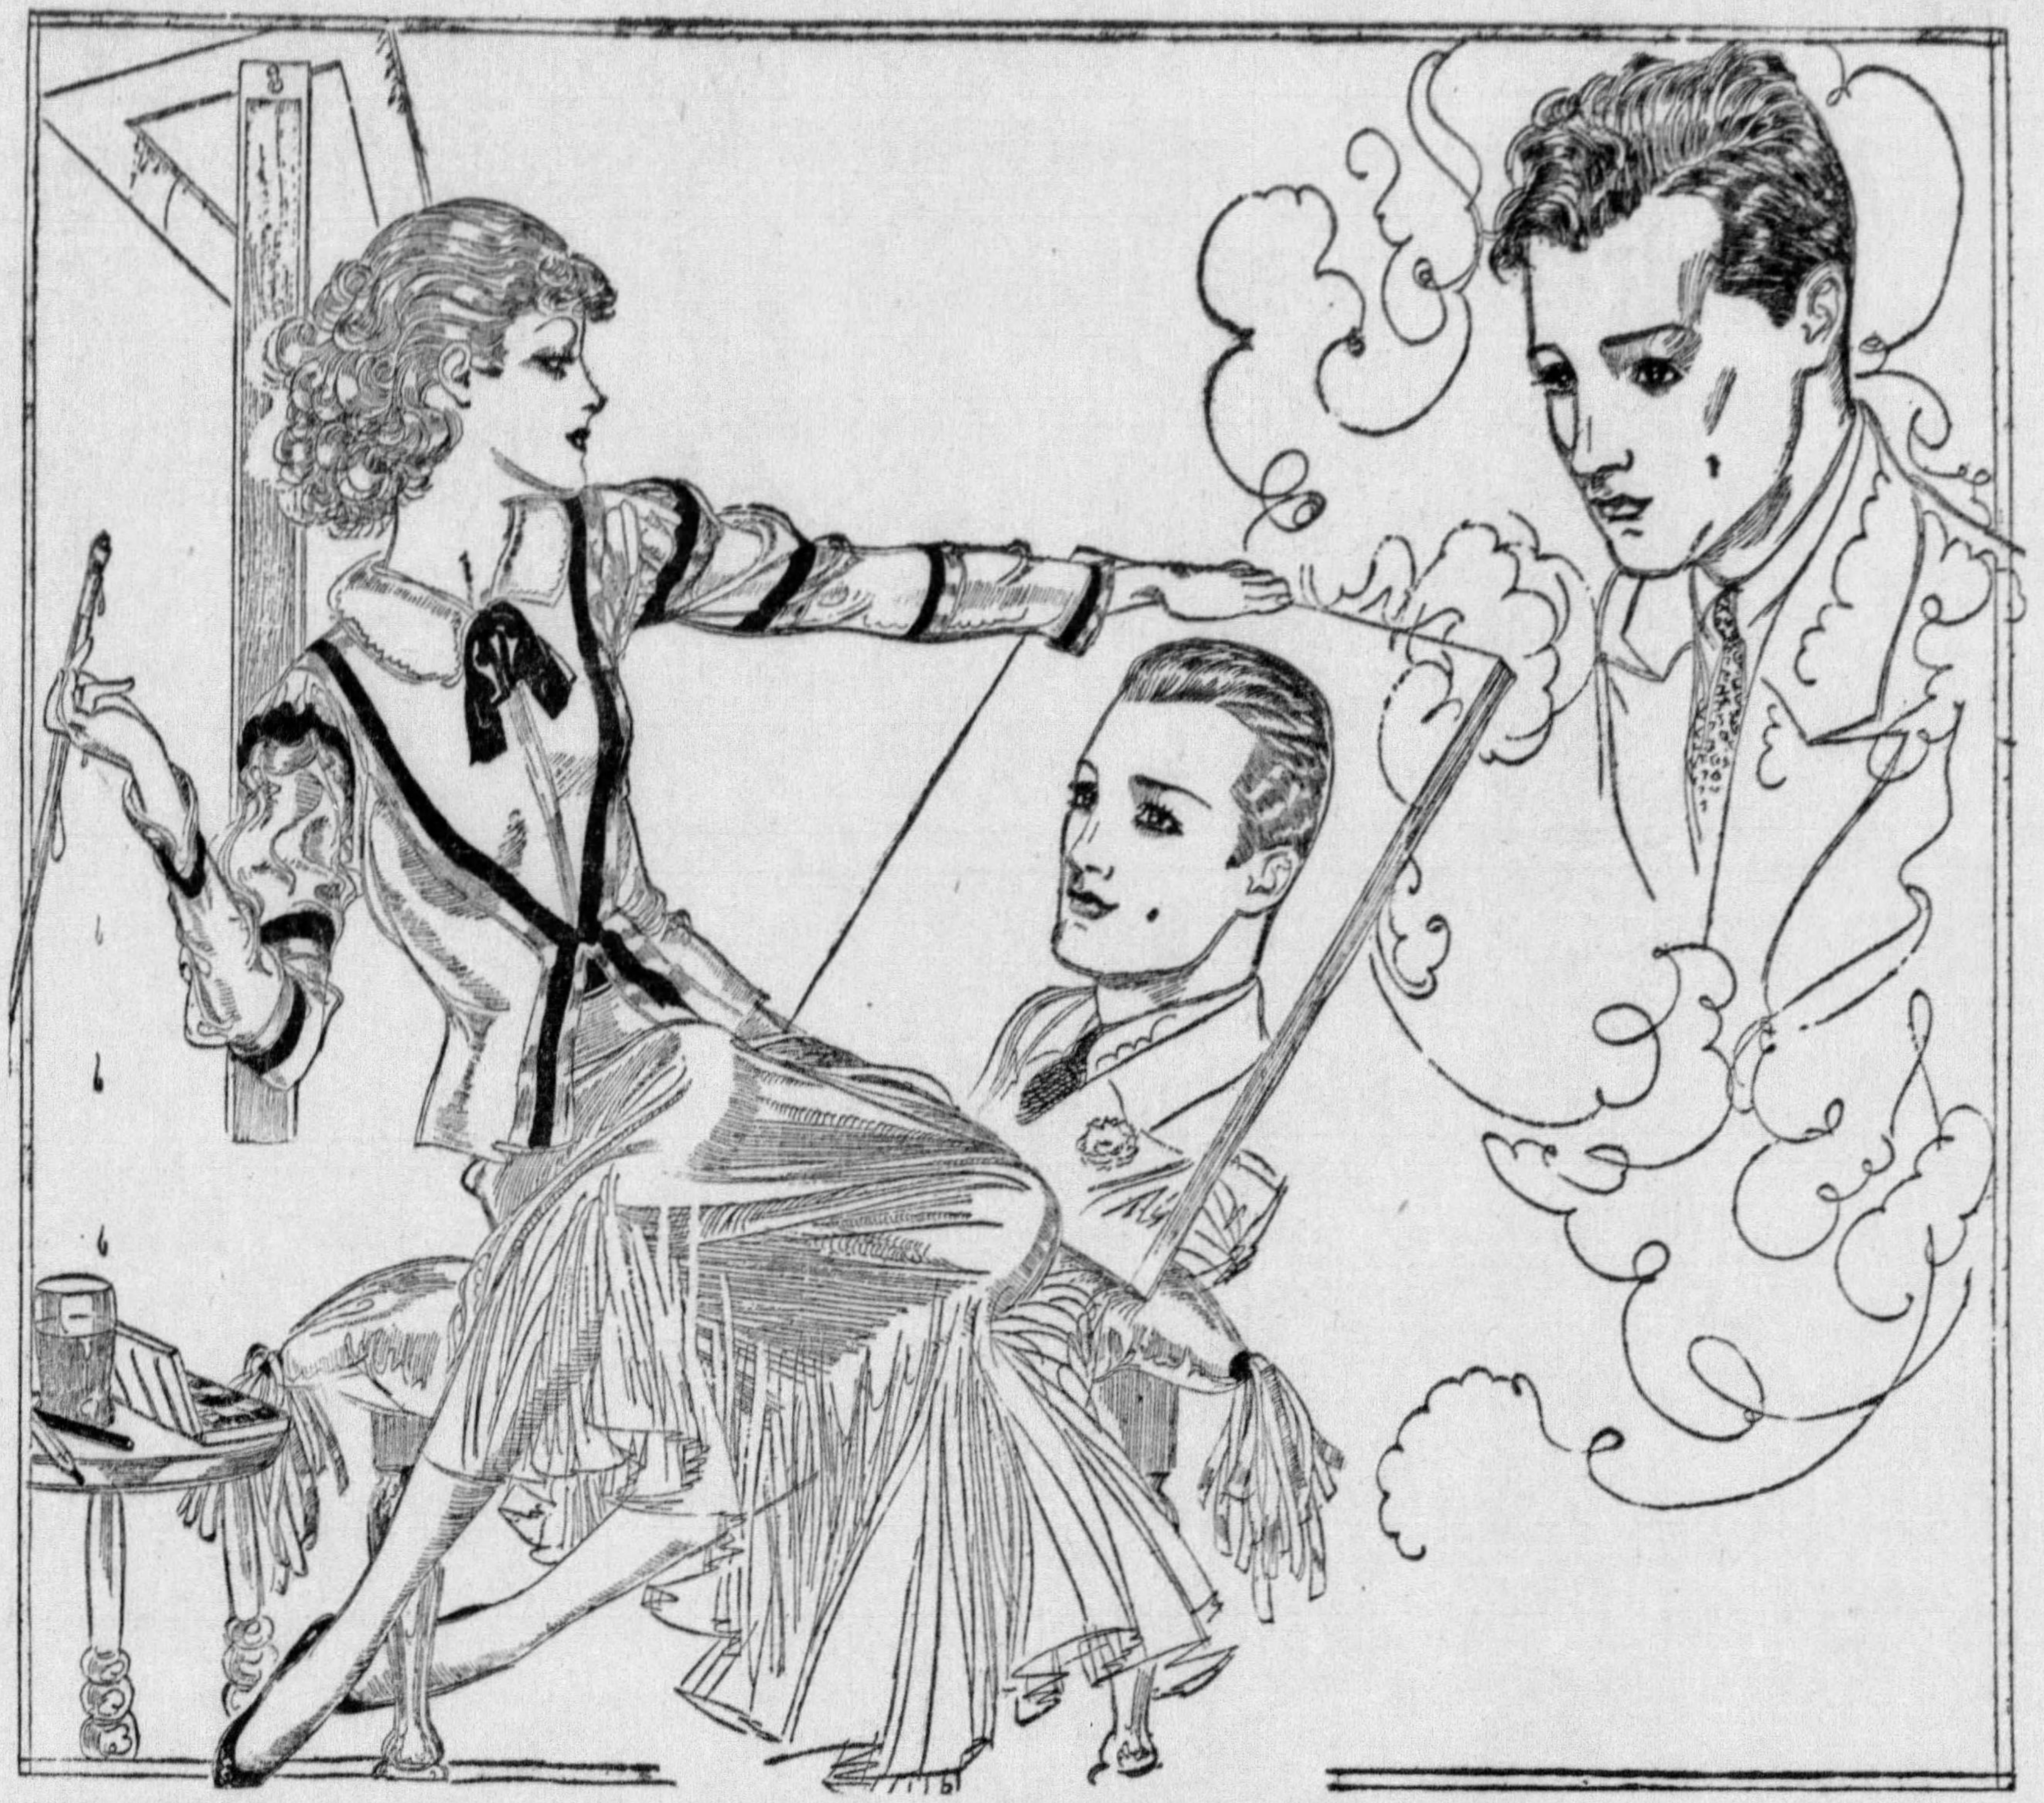
Lace dresses and coatees can easily be laundered at home. Make a lukewarm lather of soap flakes, or shredded pure white soap, and squeeze the garment gently in the hands. Rinse in two waters, using in the second a little gum arabic or dissolved sugar, to give just the right amount of stiffness to the lace. Roll in a towel and iron on the wrong side when nearly dry.

Chop sour apples and add them to beef hash. You'll find the flavor improved. Chopped veal with diced potatoes also is good in hash.

Children should learn that for sanitary reasons mouth toys must not be passed from one to another. Whistles, trumpets, mouth organs, bubble pipes should be used only by the one to whom they belong. The child should be taught this just as he is taught the exclusive use of his own tooth brush.

'I LOVE MY LOVE—' =O= =O=

Drawn by Nell Brinkley



"I love my love with a B— because he is beautiful."

A little girl I once knew—who somehow, by the magic that lets Time go by without marking the heart in the way he marks the body and the face, is the same little girl to herself, if to nobody else—used to skip along on the buffalo grass of the prairie, along with other little skippers, and sing that childish chant, "I love my love with a B— because he is beautiful." In her mind—of course he would be beautiful! Beautiful of face, beautiful of character, beautiful of soul and heart. A Prince Charming in a collar and tie and a Norfolk jacket. (It was Norfolk jackets instead of windbreaks, then.) And sure enough the little boy, when he came along, with the brown eyes and the forelock of brown hair over one eye, who pulled the cactus needle out of her foot, WAS beautiful. He was kind and he was smart, and he knew everything, and he had a fascinating face. To the little girl. To the rest of the world of the prairie schools and fields, and foothill town, he was just a turned-up nosed little boy with freckles.

Came the bigger loves. They too were beautiful for a while, though Time and a growing heart made their images come clear in her mind in all their plainness and faultiness. They lost the Princely look and became just boys.

But came the last one, the real one; came to stay. She loved him with a B because he was beautiful. He wore the Princely look for years; still wears it; and will I think until he has a long gray beard. His belt has grown more ample; he has a frosting of gray at the temples; she has found out that he can be as obstinate as any small boy bucking his mother; but somehow he remains beautiful. Because the small girl found the love of her life. She loves him with a B, because he really, honestly, is beautiful. Maybe the casuals who pass him by do not think so; but she is sure they do.

There are a land-full of wives who think their husbands the nicest, the most wonderful, the handsomest, and the best. All wives are not in Reno, or wishing themselves there! The loveliest girl can begin, by adoring the plainest of young men, a life of prize-story interest and happiness. She sees his nose not as a rather homely one; his eyes for a light that is there for herself and love; his mouth for a sweetness that is there only for her and their life together. She paints his portrait on her consciousness, and there it stays in fixed colors. That's a very good thing about the priceless thing that is real love, it makes simple-hearted men into heroes, plain fellers into Lord Byrons, and plodders into wits. And after all there are a lot of just plain men, young and old, who actually are all of these things, through the love and tenderness they have given some woman.

Husband's Business Partner Declares War on Madge

As I finished my hurried talk to Edith Fairfax over the telephone and waited breathlessly for her answer, Lillian raised her hands high in the air and patted them noiselessly. But though I was cheered at her approval of my tactics, I was not assured of the success of my ruse. Dicky's manner when he had told me of Edith's dolor had been such as to make me very doubtful of being able to overcome her expressed determination not to come to Mary's wedding, because she thought I did not want her.

I knew something else, also—that her aversion to me was stronger than my dislike of her. She had the consciousness of defeat and of frustration to whet the edge of her hatred against me—for I know very well that her feeling toward me could well be dubbed hatred.

Dicky did not return in any degree the love she had cherished for him for so many years.

But all this was beside the mark. Was Edith taking this occasion as an excuse to throw down an open gauntlet between us, or was she really cherishing a special rancor against me because I had refused to listen to her warning about the mysterious "Floss"? Would her better instincts and her sense of decorum lead her to smother either a general or a special grievance, at least until the wedding was over? Above all, would she see through my present ruse?

AGREE TO TRUCE

I had not long to wait for the answer to my last query. There was a silence of perhaps five seconds after I had finished speaking, then Edith's pretty, silvery laugh, a bit strained but mirthful-sounding, came over the wire.

"Bravo, old dear!" she said mockingly. "A noble effort, nobly planned and worthily executed. But don't get it into your head that I've fallen for it. I made up my mind, after I made my spiel to the Dickybird, that while I don't care any more of a tinker's dam what you think about me than you do about my opinion of you, it isn't exactly the clubby thing to sharpen up the knives upon the occasion of a wedding. So, if you're willing to call a truce for a few days, I am. Does that go for you?"

"I haven't the faintest idea what you mean," I told her mendaciously. "But if you think there's need for a truce, I'm perfectly willing to agree to anything you say, just so you come to the wedding."

"Oh, I'll be there with both my silver-slippered feet, and with my hair, if not in a braid, in the very latest coiffure," she said, in the same mirthful, mocking tones. "And I'll bring the little ribbons, if you're dead sure you want 'em, and aren't just stalling beautifully for the general effect."

"Of course I want them," I told her indignantly, and Edith's mocking laugh rang out again.

NURSES GRIEVANCE

"Keep the lingerie in place," she advised. "I've already told you I'll be there, and nothing but diamonds and pearls shall drop from my ruby lips until after the wedding. But just a word in your shell-like ear"—her voice was suddenly malevolent—"look out for the toads tumbling out afterward. I haven't forgotten the way you gave me the air when I was trying to do you a service about your precious husband, and I'm going to settle that score in full when I get around to it. But a truce for the wedding! Ta, ta, darling!"

"Goodby," I said dazedly, for her kaleidoscopic changes of mood had left me breathless. And then Lillian was upon me, her hands clutching my shoulders, her eyes brilliant.

"Did you put it over?" she asked breathlessly. "It sounded like it for a bit, but you looked so woe-begone at the last that my heart did flip-flops."

"You can put it right back in its proper place," I told her, smiling. "Everything is perfectly all right. Edith will come to the wedding, and she will 'declare a truce,' whatever that means, until after all the festivities are over."

"Whatever that means!" Lillian repeated slowly. "You know very well what that means, and I don't want you holding out on me. Get me right! I'm not asking you anything that concerns Dicky, but Edith Fairfax is something else again. You've got too much honor and chivalry, and too many scruples, to deal with that dame.

"Come clean, old dear. Give mother all the dope. Just what is this truce, and what does little Edie plan to do when the truce is ended?"

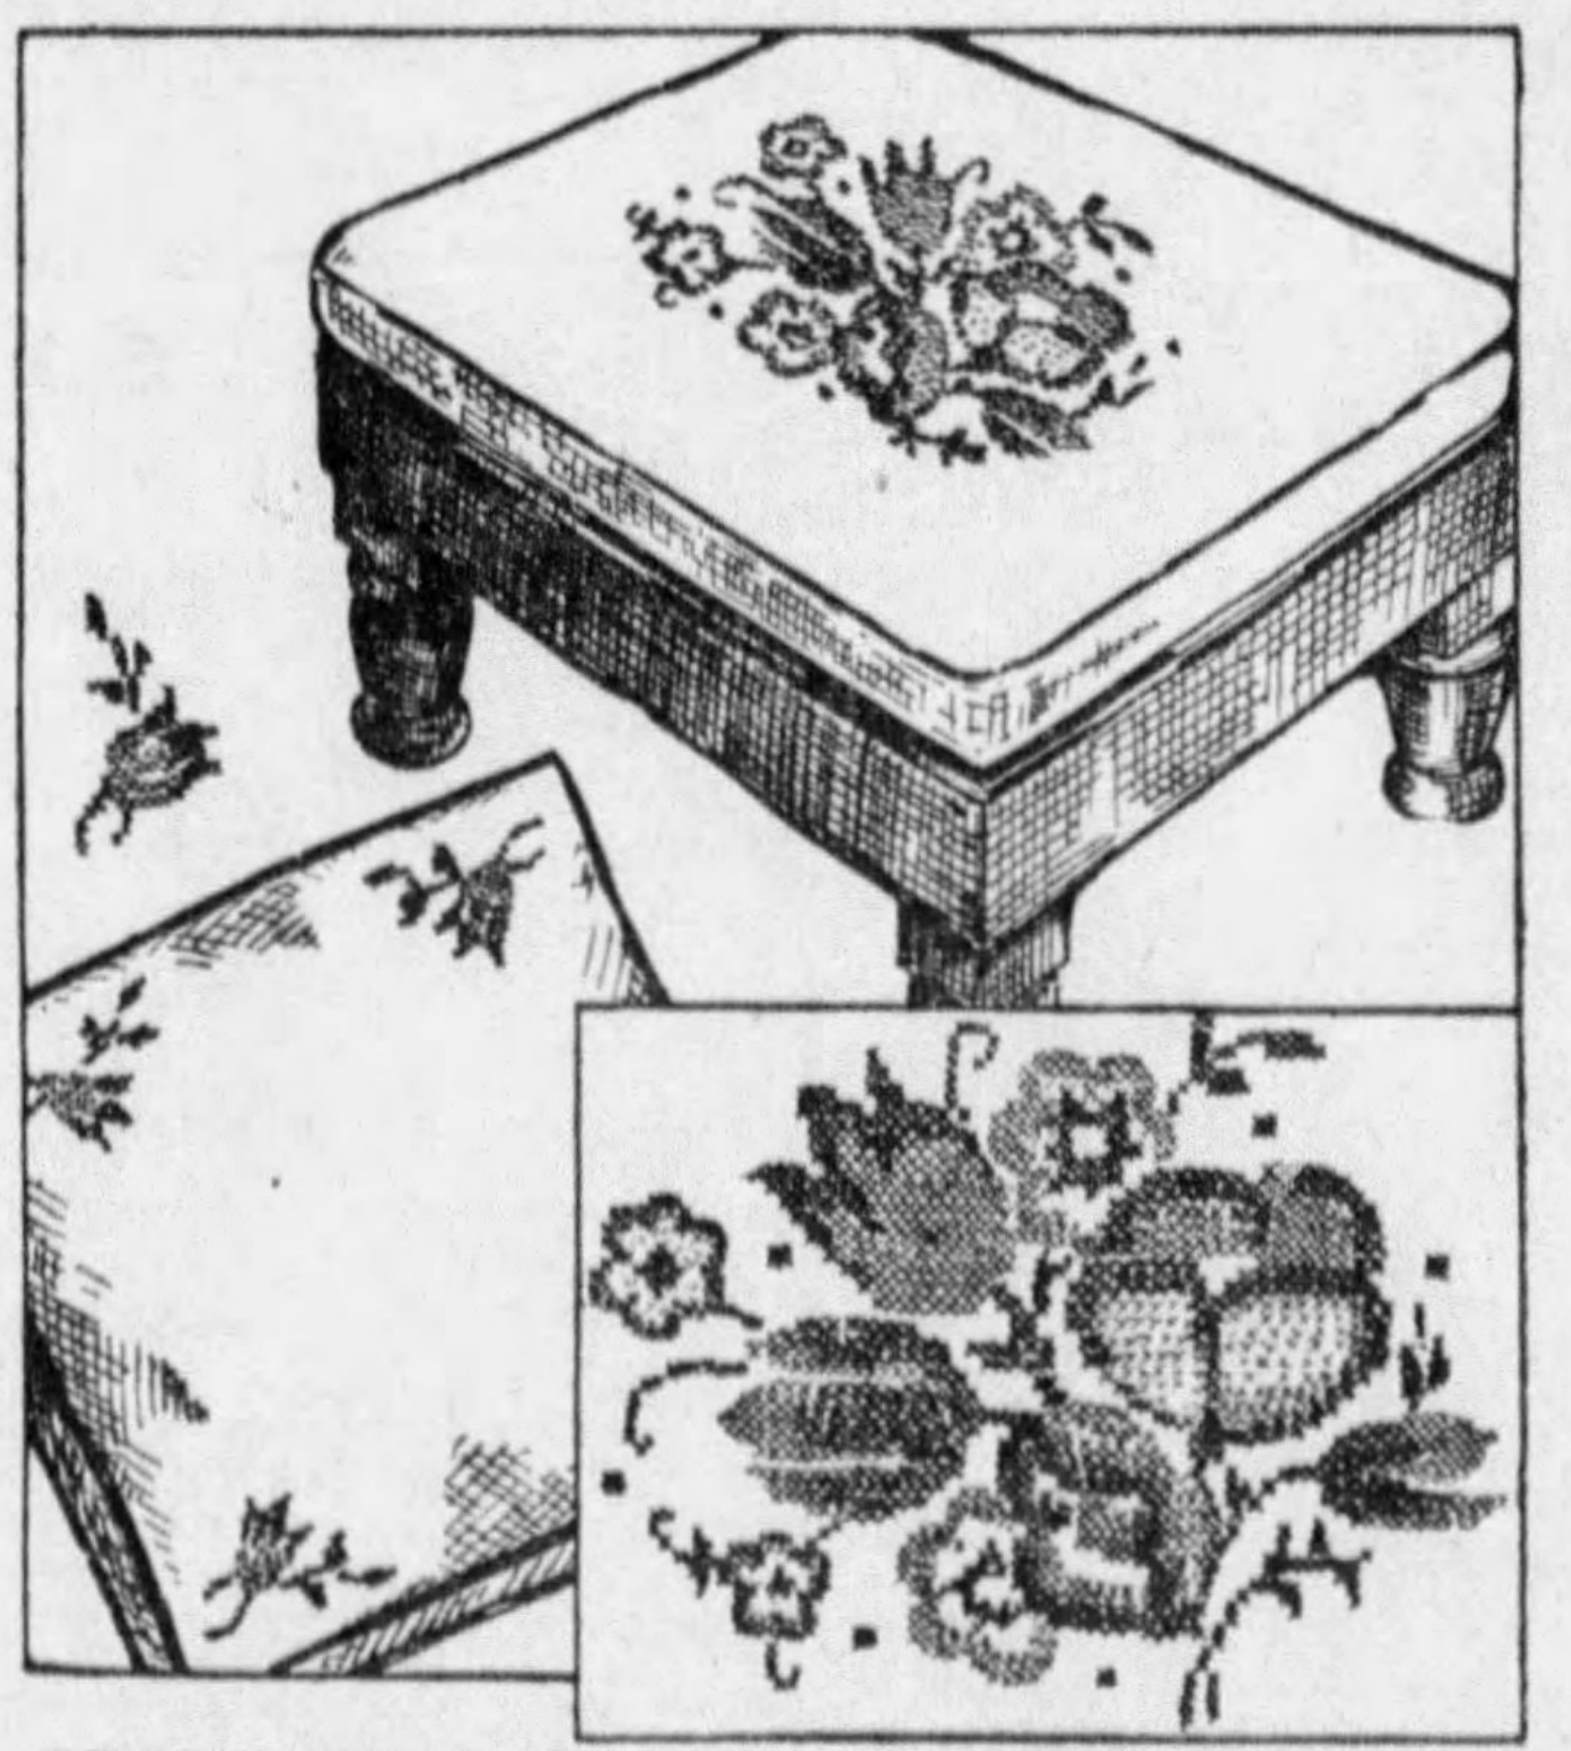
LAURA WHEELER DESIGNS



CROSS-STITCH MOTIFS PATTERN 560

Embroidered Footstool Lovely Gift

We may scorn many of the ideas of Early Victorian days, but when it comes to the lovely, quaint floral motifs that were so popular with the needlewoman of that day, we agree entirely with her taste and so decorate our footstools and pillows with them, just as she did. This quaint cross-stitch nosegay of old-fashioned flowers is to be done in a variety of colors, each flower being embroidered in at least two different shades. The crosses, being of a good size, make embroidery easy. The large motif is suitable for a footstool or pillow top and is most striking done in wool. The smaller motifs can be used either in combination with the larger one, or separately, as illustrated.

Pattern 560 comes to you with the transfer pattern of one large motif 7 x 9 inches, four small motifs 2½ inches square, a color key to follow when embroidering, and directions and yardages for making the articles shown.

Send 10 cents for this pattern to the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph Needlecraft Department, 82 Eighth Avenue, New York City.

The 'High Temperature' Treatment of Arthritis

Dr. Copeland

Within recent years many cases of arthritis have been successfully dealt with by the so-called "high temperature treatment." This will be of interest to the sufferers from arthritis who have resorted to various measures without benefit.

I have before me a report stating that when this method is suitably used great relief is afforded. Many bed-ridden victims are so improved that they are able to walk again.

The high temperature treatment is given in a specially constructed cabinet. The patient lies with his head outside while his body is exposed to a temperature reaching one hundred and two degrees, or even higher. Those who have received this treatment state that there is usually an immediate improvement in the stiffness of the joints. In many instances a complete cure is effected within a short time.

When this form of treatment is not available, the application of heat in other forms, such as hot baths, fomentations, and hot packs is often beneficial. Fomentations to an inflamed knee joint, ankle or shoulder usually lead to the relief of pain and other distress.

Occasionally the plain hot bath is helpful. Hot packs, dry heat from special lamps, as well as sun baths, are recommended for persistent and distressing cases of arthritis.

It must be borne in mind, however, that there are certain forms of arthritis which are not benefited by exposure to high temperature. Of course, in addition to this form of treatment, it is necessary to get rid of all centers of infection, such as may be present in diseased tonsils, teeth and sinuses. Neglect of diseased teeth and failure to remove infection found elsewhere, will seriously interfere with the complete cure of arthritis.

Such disorders as constipation, intestinal inflammation, and other chronic inflammations of the body must be corrected. Few persons realize the importance of normal elimination. Many authorities believe that chronic constipation is to be regarded as one of the most important causes of arthritis.

If you are a sufferer from arthritis, consult a doctor and have the necessary examination to determine the cause of the inflammation. Drink at least six to eight glasses of water each day, and include in your diet those foods which are rich in vitamins A, B and D. Avoid a high protein diet. Include in your diet an abundant supply of fresh fruits, salads, cooked greens and other fresh vegetables.

Correct Manners

By Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman

Bread-and-Butter Note

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

My aunt, who is 18, is attending college and working for her room and board. The lady she stays with allowed me to come and spend the night with my aunt. I had never met this lady until I came for the week-end and she was very hospitable.

I am 16 years of age and I would like to send her a note of some kind, showing my appreciation for letting me stay at her house. How shall I word this note?

D.

I'm happy that you are going to write this note, for people who are so kind and hospitable as this woman was should receive an especially appreciative note of thanks.

Perhaps your letter might be worded something like this:

Dear Mrs. Robinson:

I want to tell you how deeply and highly I appreciate your kindness and hospitality to me last week-end when you so generously permitted me to stay with my aunt in your home. It was so friendly of you, and I thank you with all my heart for your goodness.

I enjoyed so much knowing you, Mrs. Robinson, for my aunt has written me so much of your sweetness and kindness, and it was a great delight to stay in your home. Your thoughtfulness of me touched me deeply, and my visit was made a memory-making one.

Every good wish and friendly greeting to you, and again my most sincere appreciation.

Very sincerely yours,

Making New Friends

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I have been married a few months and have moved to my husband's home town to live, where I know no one. Since coming here many of the most prominent ladies of the town have called on me, leaving their cards. I have never used a calling card, or gone in for society very much, and I would like to know your version of the following:

1—Should I start using a card? Is it quite necessary that I should?

2—Some of the ladies have set days for calling marked on their cards. Would it be improper to call any other day?

3—I have been neglectful about returning these calls. What should one say by way of explanation, and what does one say about their having called and so forth?

1—At once get yourself a visiting card, a perfect visiting card. This is a very small cost and you will be socially awkward until you have one. Have it of the correct paper, size, excellent texture and excellently engraved. If you need help on this, write me again and I'll gladly help. Use no abbreviations on the card.

MRS. HENRY ATWATER
WELLINGTON

And it would be best, especially for you, a newcomer, to have your address engraved in the lower right-hand corner.

I suggest Shaded Antique Roman. Ask your engraver to show you that.

2—It would be best to follow the day suggested, and call on that day.

3—Return the call as soon as possible, say that you are sorry not to have come sooner, and thank your hostess most graciously and enthusiastically for her kind welcoming visit to you.

Walter Winchell ON BROADWAY

Portrait of a Man Thumbing His Nose

Among other things this work-drunkard must not do, it appears, without exciting an army of wronguessers is take a vacation . . . It would not quench the curiosity of many recently when they were told we weren't feeling high—and that doctors counseled a brief holiday from the routine . . . There must have been another reason, the legend spreaders argued . . . The result was that the rumors were bunched and we became the victim of our own villainy—gossip . . . George Jessel, a year or so ago, remarked: "He can't be so sick. The flags aren't out!" . . . Well, as a matter of fact, we weren't this time, either . . . The big idea is that we are a little wiser—we no longer wait until we are sick! When the zip and zoom zeros, we figure that the reader rates a break. Why bore the subscriber with frail wordage? Go away for a while—and get charged up again—which is what we did . . . Then, too, so many of the Broadway do-or-die boys lately have gone to the devil—from believing that the town couldn't function without them . . . And while their mourners alleged it was from being "run-down"—it seemed to us that they perished from always being wound-up.

But what we started out to jot down was this paragraph from the most capable of the Girl Fridays . . . In a letter she wrote: "I suppose you know that your 'mysterious disappearance' (although the column explained illness) has the town babbling. It would take several pages to list them all, but here are a few of the 'reasons' why you left town . . . (1) You were chased away by gangsters—they used that the last time. (2) You were paralyzed after being shot by an irate column victim—they used that one last year, also. (3) That you are seriously ailing from an incurable ailment, a brain tumor (that's a compliment!) . . . (4) That you are never coming back, you're fed up with the profession. (5) That disappointment over your picture not being the greatest picture in the world drove you to brooding in Florida. (6) That Mrs. Winchell is having a baby and you merely went away to see that everything turned out all right . . . Oh, well. If they aren't talking about you—they're talking about someone else—and you can take it . . . And, believe me, you can have it!"

There is little we can add to the passing of Texas Guinan. The lads who knew her as well as we did, have testified to her character, and we subscribe to their sentiments . . . We learned about Broadway from her. She taught us the way of the Street . . . For many seasons, between the hours of 6 and 8 a. m. Texas filled many a column for this corner—with her wit and observations . . . Some of the editorial writers, however, made us a little ill in the middle with their last press-notices . . . Some of them were so inaccurate in their knowledge of her career, that we got the jitters marking time to return to the typewriter . . . "Texas," one of them chronicled, "was great while she lasted. Something a little quieter, more sedate and refined took the place of her whooping and yelling and banging resorts. Her vogue passed in New York, and she took to the road—where she failed toward bringing in the customers." . . . Is that so? Miss Guinan "took to the road" not because she was outmoded or dated, at all. She left town because Grover Whalen, the Police Commissioner at the time, was the subject of one of her gayer songs. Mr. Whalen didn't think the wordage of that ditty was comical, so his gendarmes went to work on her. Texas Guinan could only be interested in important money, and when the cops are posted in your place, they frighten off trade. So she went away . . . But not to fail, as they said . . . Among other cities where she shattered box-office records was Seattle . . . In Detroit, frinstance, she broke the all-time record by enticing over 105,000 spectators to a theatre in a week . . . A flop, huh?

One of the locals had something for which to celebrate Thanksgiving Day, at any rate . . . The girl he married five years ago went through his money quickly and when he was broke—she shelved him . . . He hadn't encountered a word about her until recently, when walking down the street wondering from where the next dime was coming—and the next meal—an old pal stopped him . . . After the usual salutations the old pal remarked: "I hear your ex-wife is getting married again soon." . . . He mentioned the groom-to-be's name . . . A rich man . . . That same day the husband called upon an attorney he knew and related the news . . . "We have never been divorced!" he explained . . . The attorney used but one letter to unravel matters . . . The one letter resulted in a threatened alienation of affections suit being discarded; a hurried Mexican abrogation plus a settlement to the husband of $25,000.

Stephen Ames, the broker who still has money, is better known as the ex-husband of Adrienne Ames, the screen actress, who recently divorced him to marry Bruce Cabot . . . His intimates relate that Ames was "regular" about the recent bust-up . . . He made no scene, when he definitely learned that his beautiful wife cared for Cabot . . . Ames stepped out of it gracefully . . . But not until he had turned over a new mansion to his wife. The home cost him $150,000 . . . He also gave her $110,000 in cash . . . When he was visiting her on the coast, Ames purchased an overcoat and two topcoats—and in his haste to return to Wall street, forgot them . . . After the divorce, Ames wrote her asking her to send on his three coats. He drew no answer. He wrote her lawyers. Still no reply . . . He burned . . . The many costly gifts he gave her didn't irk him now—but he was not going to be gypped out of those three coats, by golly . . . Finally, his own lawyer on the coast, replied: "Adrienne says she can't find the coats, you must be mistaken" . . . To which the exasperated Ames replied: "Look at those honeymoon pictures — he's wearing one!"

ComedyShow In Pitt

By ZORA D. UNKOVICH

Some real old-timers are in the Pitt this week and they prove that youth and beauty are in no ways essentials to stage success.

There's Bob Hall, for one (he's really not so ancient), who panics the audience with his extemporaneous rhymes just as he did in the days of the old Davis two-a-day. Grown-ups and children respond to his congenial nonsense in a way that lets him know they like it.

Then, in "Artists of the Past," troupers of over 50 years' experience dance, sing, play and gag for you. Netti de Coursey, Ed Jamison, Jack Miller, Frank Brown and Mae Deland are the gray-haired veterans who command admiring applause.

Of first-class showmanship is the Ralph Olsen Revue, staged by a considerably younger generation. In a series of appearances in which one group represents Hollywood, the other Broadway, the artists present entertaining dancing and singing, as well as some impersonations that are expertly done, and a Hollywood rehearsal that could well be omitted.

Dell Chain and Earl Bronson change from a weak beginning that decidedly palls to a laugh-provoking execution of "hokumology." Another comedy characterization is that of Al Lydell, who's aged rube sport role is developed in company of comely Ruth Gallagher.

Of interest to the children is Mickey, the trained seal, who, like many humans, insists on clapping for himself. Dorothy and the King Brothers round out the program with dancing.

Not forgetting next Tuesday's liberation, Joe Palvo and his band present a novelty overture based on "How Dry I Am."

On the screen there is another of those highly dramatic office building stories, "Manhattan Tower," with Mary Brian the center of the trouble.

Plays and Players

By WILLIAM J. LEWIS

"Blonde Bombshell," starring Jean Harlow, with Lee Tracy in a prominent role, is the new screen feature in the Enright.

* * *

The Harris Family Theater today has "Walls of Gold" as its screen feature, to run through Tuesday. Sally Eilers and Norman Foster head the cast.

* * *

The Variety will present a new program of "old-fashioned burlesque," entitled "Making Whoopee," opening with a Sunday midnight show.

Eve Le Gallienne will bring her Civic Repertory Theater Company to the Nixon Monday night. "Alice in Wonderland" will be given at five shows, including two matinees; "Romeo and Juliet," Thursday and Friday, and "Hedda Gabler," Saturday night.

Mitzi Green Gets Mature Part

By HARRISON CARROLL

HOLLYWOOD, Dec. 2.—Little Mitzi Green—can you believe it—has put on long skirts and is coming back to motion pictures in grownup roles.

Miss Green

In a brief year and a half, Mitzi has grown up and she has signed a contract with RKO to play a boarding school girl in "Just Off Fifth Avenue."

The youthful comedienne will get here sometime before the holidays and begin work by the first of the year. And here's a tip for you. RKO is putting heavy pressure on Frances Dee and Joel McCrea to play the romantic leads in the same film.

No, they haven't said yes yet, and it's better than even odds that they will stand by their original idea of maintaining separate careers.

* * *

They're all chuckling about Sophie Tucker's encounter with Vince Barnett.

The professional ribber dropped into a Hollywood late spot after a day's work at Columbia and was introduced to Sophie in his familiar role of a German producer.

"Vat is de name?" he inquired.

"I'm Sophie Tucker," replied the comedienne, polite but a little nettled.

Barnett shook his head.

"Naah," he sneered, "you don't even look like her. I know Sophie Tucker. She's a little colored girl."

* * *

Mr. Jolson

Any loud noise you hear coming from the Warner Brothers studio will be the "Wonder Bar" situation coming to a head. The all-star cast assembled for the picture feel that it's too much a case of playing second fiddle to Al Jolson. Rumor says there's a lively battle for closeups going on, and that the rivalry is not entirely good-humored. Al, of course, is not worrying. He picked the play, and his role is a good one. But some of the other actors are envying Warren William and Genevieve Tobin, who bowed out of the assignment.

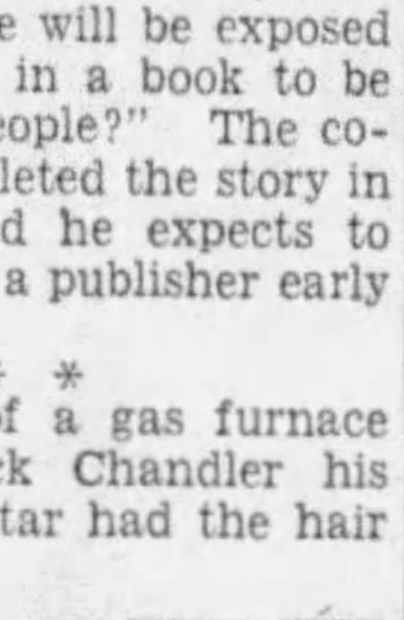
* * *

Hollywood's former "Little Church Around the Corner," where the Rev. Neal Dodd won the title of motion picture chaplain, is to be converted into a theater—a 99-seat intimate play-house, where Mrs. Lela Rogers, mother of Ginger Rogers, will put on a series of plays. The first, "Even As Heathens," opens next Tuesday with Betty Furness playing a leading role. Mervyn Leroy already has bought 10 seats for the opening night, and Lew Ayres, Ginger's current interest, has reserved another block.

* * *

The rackets that Hollywood stars have to face will be exposed by Bert Wheeler in a book to be called "Square People?" The comedian has completed the story in outline form, and he expects to have it ready for a publisher early in the new year.

* * *



Miss O'Sullivan

An explosion of a gas furnace nearly cost Chick Chandler his life. The RKO star had the hair singed off his arms, hands, eyebrows and off the front part of his head . . . Although six reels of "Viva Villa" film were lost in that burning plane, MGM insists they were all of one battle which has already been retaken in Mexico . . . Maureen O'Sullivan will be out of the hospital next week, and doctors say she can return to work in about three . . . Some less important stars might take a lesson in modesty from George Arliss. With the pick of the bungalows on the United Artists lot at his disposal, the English actor chose a small suite in the regular dressing room building.

WILL ROGERS SAYS

BEVERLY HILLS, Cal., Dec. 2.

To the Editor, Sun-Telegraph:

Will Rogers

This staying on the gold is a tough job, unless everybody is on it. If you are on the gold, and the rest of the boys are not, why you change your money into theirs, then demand it in gold. Now France is on the gold and is cuckoo. She reads every morning how many millions in gold was shipped out the day before (just like we used to do before we went off the gold) and it's gradually driving her "nuts." So it looks like everybody has either got to be on it, or off of it. You can't play solo.

Yours, WILL.

Mosaic and a Girl

DOLORES DEL RIO OF "FLYING DOWN TO RIO," AND SPOT IN HOME DESIGNED BY HUBBY, CEDRIC GIBBONS

All in a Day

By Mark Hellinger

The Brave Fool

HE DIDN'T appreciate it. But it was a pretty picture. It wasn't quite dark yet. The Palisades on the far shores were still visible, and the chain of yellow lights along the top looked like a coronet. The sky beyond was apple green, and the calm Hudson looked like a silver mirror.

Behind him he heard the crunching of dead leaves. Kids. Kids in love. Young boys and girls who held hands and stole quick kisses in the shadow of the trees. Love. What did they know of love? What did they know of the dripping bitterness that can overflow a heart in love? What did they know of—oh, the devil! Better forget it. . .

But you can't forget a girl like Muriel. Girls like her can't be forgotten. You can try; you can say you will; but you can't.

He took the letter out again. "Dear Penswick," it began. He felt that he could choke her for those two words alone. "Dear," he knew, was sarcasm. Heavy accent on that. And Penswick—how could a man be saddled with a name like that? Rollingame was bad enough. But the two together, Penswick Rollingame, were unbearable.

"Dear Penswick: This is goodby. Please don't phone or write." (So! She thought he'd crawl, eh?) "My affection hasn't changed. It's still the same. There is no one else." (I suppose I should be thankful for that!) "But I expect more in a man than the ability to discuss chess and the component parts of various angles.

"So this is goodby." (Rubbing it in. Had to say it twice). "If ever you should change, and become my idea of a red-blooded man, I'll be happy to apologize for this letter."

He folded the note carefully, and put it in the side pocket of his coat. He sat there for a moment, staring at the beauty of the river scene, unseeing.

Suicide. She'd call him a coward. She'd say that he had no nerve; no faith in himself.

Nope. That was out.

Finally, he stood up. He buttoned the top of his coat so that he wouldn't catch cold. He stuffed his hands in his pockets and walked through the trees aimlessly.

Then he heard a voice.

"Stick 'em up!" The voice was brusque, but quiet.

Penswick Rollingame stood stock still. The order, clearly enough, was not for him. It was for the shorter of the two men who stood several yards to the rear. A burly man, pistol in hand, was advancing slowly toward the smaller chap.

Rollingame's brain wanted his body to run, to flee, but his legs wouldn't accept the order. Muriel moved in and out of his thoughts steadily. "Afraid," he could hear her taunting. "You're afraid. Here's your big chance to prove yourself a man—and you're afraid. Why don't you run?"

He did. Penswick Rollingame ran—toward the voices. The two men were facing each other. The light from Riverside Drive glinted silvery on the gun. Penswick, hysterical in his ferocity, leaped upon the holdup man from behind and grabbed the gun. He knew by the resultant howl that he had broken the villian's hand.

The man fought well, though. The gun fell somewhere, and the two men rolled over and over in the dead leaves, grunting, pulling, tearing, all without a word being uttered. Penswick gloried in it while it lasted. He could see the headlines: "Brave Young Man Foils Holdup." He could see Muriel, too, repentant, begging for forgiveness. Something hard hit his head. And then darkness came. . . .

It was daylight. The hospital walls looked too bright. They hurt his eyes. He saw a nurse walking by his bed, and she seemed to bounce slowly as she walked.

She told him that he had been unconscious for two days. He asked, hopefully, if anyone had been in to see him, and she said, yes, a pretty young lady. He smiled, and she handed him a folded piece of paper.

"She left this for you."

Carefully he unfolded the note. He knew that she would apologize, but he didn't think she'd do it so soon.

"Dear Penswick:" the note said. "I always knew I was right about you. In case you haven't seen the newspapers, you might read the attached clippings. Muriel."

Painfully, he read the small, clipped item.

"Tough Tony Murdoch, notorious escaped convict, came within a hair's breadth of capture last night when Detective Mori arrested him at gun point in the park off Riverside Drive.

"Suddenly, however, the detective was attacked from behind by a person at first supposed to be an ally of Murdock's. Investigation proved the young man to be Penswick Rollingame, who stupidly took it to be a holdup." . . .

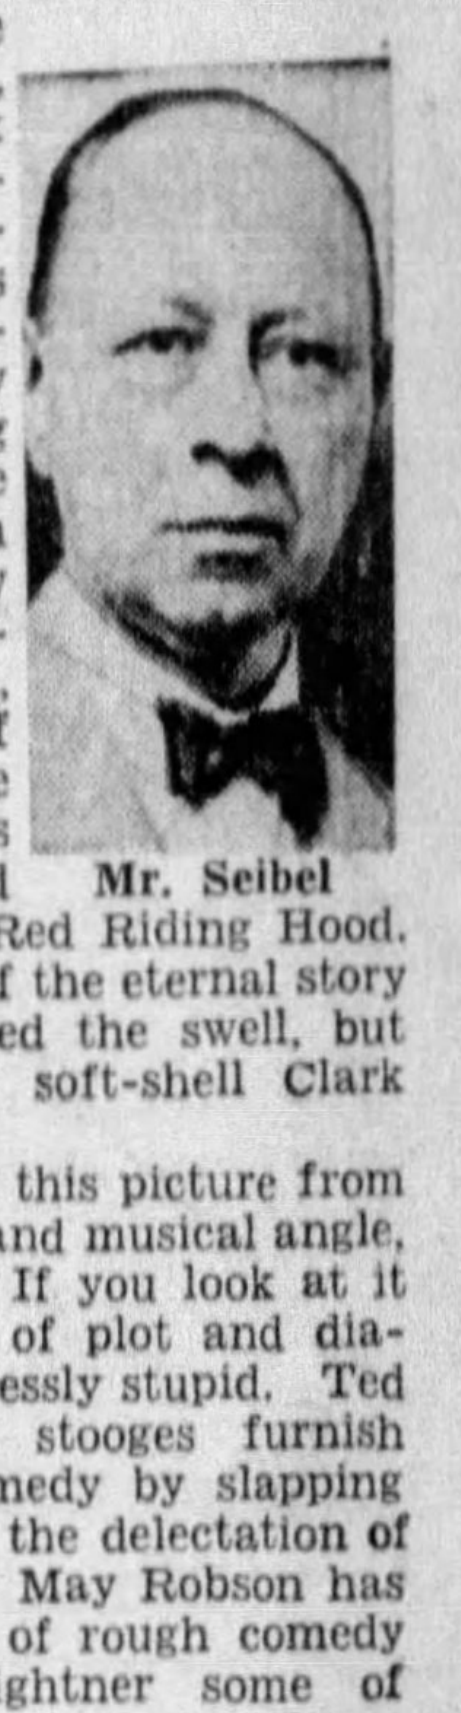
Loud Splash In Picture At Penn

By GEORGE SEIBEL



Mr. Seibel

Joan Crawford and Franchot Tone do some submarine love-making of the first water in "Dancing Lady," the new musical picture at the Penn Theater, while Clark Gable is a hard-boiled stage director who has to act gruff behind his sickly smile. "Dancing Lady" is the eighty-third film in which a raw chorus girl becomes a star, wins the love of a Park avenue swell and stays as sweet and clean as Little Red Riding Hood. In this variant of the eternal story she does not wed the swell, but the hard-boiled soft-shell Clark Gable.

If you look at this picture from the spectacular and musical angle, it is gorgeous. If you look at it from the angle of plot and dialogue, it is hopelessly stupid. Ted Healy and his stooges furnish most of the comedy by slapping one another for the delectation of the adolescent. May Robson has a few moments of rough comedy and Winnie Lightner some of smooth comedy—both machine-made. Fred Astaire does some dexterous dancing—and so does Joan Crawford

But the ballets and dance numbers are the best of the picture by six fathoms and several furlongs. If there is no originality in the dull story, there is plenty of dash and novelty in the chorus work and the mechanical devices of mirrors and merry-go-rounds. If there is no acting worth special mention, there surely is plenty of action.

The new Charley Chase comedy also is a big splash—Charley falls into a lovely lake so often that there must be a hole in its bottom after the eleventh time. The submerged accordeon that turns into a squirt gun is an amusing idea, but the picture as a whole might be called "The Afternoon of a Frog."

Decidedly it's a damp day in the Penn with everybody splashing and dripping, diving and dipping.

Notre Dame hopes for a comeback against the strong Army eleven to atone for an otherwise disappointing season which so far has brought only two close score victories.

SPORT COMMENT

By James J. Long

Big Leagues Reserve 506. • Easier Going in Old Days.
Braves' Roster Lightest. Gap in Skibo Forces.
Michigan Mark Unrivaled. Slab Lights Change Clubs.

PIRATE SQUAD OF 34 UNUSUALLY LARGE

The filing of the reserve lists of the 16 major league clubs, a procedure required annually at this time by baseball law, shows that 506 players are under reservation in the two big circuits. Of that total, 267 are in the American League and 239 in the National. Each league is far below its limit, as it is permissable for each club to reserve as many as 40 players, which would mean 640 in the two loops. The only clubs to approach the limit are the main operators of chain stores, the Yankees and the Cardinals. The Yanks are up to the full limit of 40 men, and the Cards are just one below the limit since transferring Gordon Slade to the Reds. The lightest list in either league is that of the Boston Braves, who have reserved only 22 players. The Cubs have 26 and the Phils 27. The pennant-winning Senators are low in the American, with 28.

W. E. Benswanger

The official roster of the Pirates, filed by President W. E. Benswanger, shows 34 players under reservation, exclusive of Infielder Howdy Grosskloss, who has been placed on the ineligible list. The total is made up of five catchers, 13 pitchers, nine infielders and seven outfielders, though one of the men classified as a gardener, Nick Etten, also is to be looked over as a first sacker. Elmer Trapp, Dormont shortstop, is among the infielders.

PIRATE CREW AS OFFICIALLY REGISTERED

The complete Corsair list, as officially filed, showing the largest number of players the Pittsburgh club has carried in a long time, is as follows:

Catchers—Robert Earl Grace, Arthur F. Veltman, Hal Finney, Thomas F. Padden and Walter Van Grofski.

Pitchers—Lawrence H. French, Charles F. Lucas, Ralph J. Birkofer, Harold L. Smith, William Swift, Leon Chagnon, Henry W. Meine, Stephen A. Swetonic, Waite C. Hoyt, William M. Harris, John C. Connelly, Lloyd W. Johnson and Darrell E. Blanton.

Infielders—Harold J. Traynor, Gus R. Suhr, Floyd Vaughan, Thomas J. Thevenow, Wilbur L. Brubaker, Floyd Young, George Elmer Trapp, Harry A. Lavagetto and Anthony F. Malinosky.

Outfielders—Paul J. Waner, Lloyd J. Waner, Fred Lindstrom, Forrest Jensen, Walter Roettger, Leo Nonnenkamp and Nicholas Etten.

MICHIGAN'S BIG TEN RECORD UNMATCHED

Michigan's record for consistent greatness through the years is unmatched in football. Twice since the turn of the century the Wolverines have won four consecutive championships in the Big Ten. They have not been defeated since losing to Ohio State in 1931, 20 to 7. That was their only defeat in the last four seasons, during which they won 30 games and tied three against the single reverse. They have gone through their last 22 games without being beaten, having won 20 and tied 2.

Incidentally, Michigan's closing game last Saturday was the four hundredth played by the school since it took up the sport in 1878. Its all-time record is 320 victories, 18 ties and 62 defeats, a percentage of .838. In Conference competition, the Ann Arbor gridders have not been beaten by Chicago in 16 years, by Iowa in nine, by Northwestern in eight, by Minnesota, or Wisconsin in six, or by Indiana in four.

HESTON ADMITS EASIER ROAD IN BYGONE

One star of the past who does not hesitate to admit the superiority of present performers is Willie Heston, Sr., greatest back in Michigan's history. He played on the teams that won the Conference titles in 1901-02-03-04, and says the four-year sweep of 1930-31-32-33 was an infinitely greater accomplishment. There wasn't the keen competition then that there is now, Heston concedes, adding that every Conference game these days is a major worry, whereas 30 years ago there wasn't as much cause for worry in a whole schedule as there is for one game now. "Yes, sir, the pace has quickened a lot since my time," says Willie.

Willie Heston, Sr.

Nevertheless, the achievements of Heston's old teams, the point-a-minute destroyers, will endure as a football standout. In four years they didn't lose a game, the only mar being to 6-to-6 tie with Minnesota in 1903. That tie was preceded by 29 straight victories, and it was followed by another streak that was extended to 26 straight before the final game of 1905 was lost to Chicago, 2 to 0—56 consecutive games without a defeat. In 1901, the Wolverines were not scored on in a schedule of 11 games. In four years they rolled up 2,326 points, an average of better than 52 to a game against a total of only 40 for opponents.

TECH HIT IN LINE; BEVEVINO LOST ALSO

It is in the line that Carnegie Tech will suffer its heaviest football losses by graduation before another season rolls around. The departure of Bunny Burzio, Clyde Heinzer and Henry Dreshar, guards; Capt. Red Stewart, end; Jerry O'Toole, reserve center, and Carl Forsman, tackle, will knock a huge hole in the Tartan's forward wall.

And the backfield will not escape. Coach Harpster will retain a set of good backs in the Spisak brothers, Vorderburg, Carlson, Mihm and Terebus, but he will lose an old stand-by in Quarterback Angelo Bevevino, who goes out with Fullback John Sayles anq Halfback Joe Brewer. In his three years on the varsity team, Bevevino has given excellent all-around service.

WINTER OF SHIFTS FOR STAR PITCHERS

As a general rule, a major league baseball club that gets hold of a pitcher of quality can't be tempted to part with him. Such assets are hard to find. But it looks as though a greater number of prominent hurlers will be shifted during the winter preceding the 1934 season than in any other similar period within memory. One of the best of the lot has changed uniforms already in the deal whereby Pittsburgh got Red Lucas from Cincinnati, and a record string of others may follow Lucas in going to new clubs.

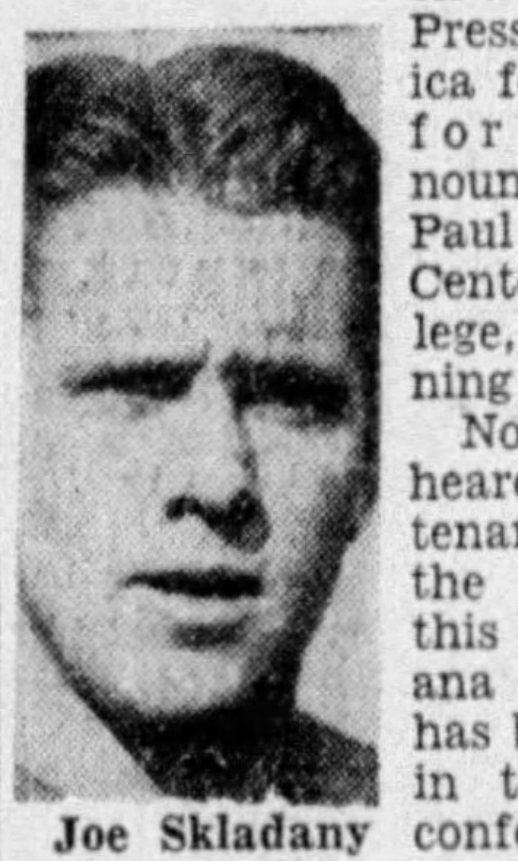
Lefty Grove

The most prominent, of course, will be Lefty Grove, unless Connie Mack changes his mind about sending the great southpaw to the Red Sox, a deal persistently reported as being as good as closed. There is no doubt that the A's will sell or trade George Earnshaw, probably to the White Sox, and Rube Walberg may move along with Grove to Boston. Wes Ferrell wants to get away from Cleveland and is expected to figure in a winter deal. It is no secret that the Cubs will dispose of Pat Malone. Paul Derringer is slated to leave the Reds. The Cardinals probably will try to find a market for Dazzy Vance and the Phils may sell Jumbo Elliott.

JOE SKLADANY SELECTED ON A. P. TEAM

(Associated Press all-America football teams and honorable mention list appear on page 10.)

NEW YORK, Dec. 2.—Joe Skladany, of the University of Pittsburgh, is named as an end on the Associated Press All-America football team for 1933, announced today. Paul Geisler, of Centenary College, is his running mate.



Joe Skladany

Not much is heard of Centenary outside of the South, but this little Louisiana team long has been a thorn in the side of conference teams and compiled an amazing two-year record in which Geisler's all-round play has been the outstanding feature.

To Skladany likewise belongs much of the credit for Pitt's solid achievements. Joe has had his name in the headlines for spectacular pass-catching, as Army will testify, but his forte is smashing interference and doing the kind of downfield work that discourages rival safety men.

Picked for the tackles are Adolphe Schwammel, Oregon State, and Freddie Crawford, Duke.

The guards are: Francis Schammel, Iowa, and Bill Corbus, Stanford.

Charles Bernard, of Michigan, is the center.

Cotton Warburton, of the Southern California Trojans, is awarded the quarterback berth.

The halfbacks are Hack Buckler, of the Army, and Francis (Pug) Lund, of Minnesota.

George Sauer, of Nebraska, is the fullback.

Stewart, Carnegie Tech; Ercius, Washington and Jefferson; Onder, West Virginia; Roe, Bluefield (W. Va.); Gillman, Ohio State; Snyder, Ohio U.

TACKLES

Five Knockouts Mark Benefit Show

Knockout punches were tossed with reckless abandon at the amateur boxing show staged for the benefit of the Homestead Welfare Fund at Turner Hall, Homestead, last night. Five knockouts were recorded, one of which was of the technical variety.

A crowd of approximately 1,000 witnessed the show. The summary:

118-pound class—Frankie Contillo, knocked out Jackie Coopie, first round.

147-pound class—Steve Kobeda knocked out Ray Chapman, first round; Frankie Uhrin defeated Joe Uhrin by a technical knockout, first round.

EXPLANATIONS OF RIPLEY'S CARTOONS OF YESTERDAY: THE BIBLE IN A NUTSHELL—Peter Bales, of London (1547-1610), was a famous calligrapher and miscroscopic writer, who wrote a Bible so small (½ cubic inch in volume) that it could be contained in the shell of a walnut. In 1575, Bales presented this miniature Bible, mounted in crystal on a ring, to Queen Elizabeah. The Queen wore the ring for many years. A GREAT MERMAID—Mrs. Van Skike, who now is in her seventy-third year, did not learn to swim until she was 55 years old. For the past 17 years she has enjoyed perfect health and steady exercise through swimming. She made a practice of celebrating her birthdays by some spectacular swimming feat. For her seventieth birthday celebration she made a 20-mile swim accompanied by friends in boats, who supplied her with lunch and water, on a jaunt to the Venic Pier, Santa Monica, Cal.

Pitt May Schedule U. C. L. A. for '35

Jimmy Hagan, graduate manager of athletics at Pitt, speaking in the absence of Athletic Director W. Don Harrison, said he knew nothing of negotiations reported between Pitt and U. C. L. A. for a home-and-home football series.

The report came out of Chicago, where a news dispatch from Los Angeles said the Panthers and Coast institution were dickering. Hagan said the schedule for 1934 already was completed, but that there might be negotiations under way for a series to start in 1935.

NEW YORK, Dec. 2.—(AP.)—Army and Princeton staked their perfect records against stout opposition today in the grand finale to one of the most exciting seasons in football history.

Army's dashing Cadets, led by Jack Buckler and Paul Johnson, encountered Notre Dame's powerful but oft-beaten eleven at the Yankee Stadium while Princeton was renewing its ancient feud with Yale in New Haven.

TIGERS, CADETS CHOICES

Both started as favorite but wary and cautious just the same, ready for hidden pitfalls. Despite Notre Dame's poor record, the Irish have flashed considerable power and Army was fearful Hunk Anderson might have found a winning combination. A crowd of 78,000 headed for the big American League ball park to discover for themselves what, if anything, was wrong with the Irish.

Princeton, on its record, was a "hot" 2½-to-1 selection over the Bulldogs of Yale who previously had succumbed to Army, Georgia and Harvard. A Yale victory, especially with Capt. Bob Lassiter an almost certain non-starter because of a leg injury, would be just about the biggest upset of a topsy-turvy season.

Two years ago, in the same Yale Bowl, a great Yale team for a day forced upon a frayed Princeton eleven as great a humiliation as the Tigers ever had suffered in the 60 years of their rivalry. Yale's 51-to-14 victory that day touched off a powder trail that has fizzed since straight toward this day, and an explosion that would blast the Elis as Princeton was blasted in 1931.

IRISH HOPES LOW

There was nothing whatever in the records to indicate Notre Dame had much chance of stopping the charge of the West Pointers in general or Johnson and Buckler in particular.

Illinois, Yale, Harvard and Navy and five other foes of lesser ranking have bowed to the Military Academy in one of the most successful campaigns in Army history. Johnson and Buckler, dangerous runners both, haven't been stopped this year and scored the two touchdowns that whipped Navy, 12-7, last week.

Victories have been few and far between for Notre Dame. The ground-gaining ability of this particular Notre Dame eleven has been equalled only by its woeful inability to score. The Irish gained yards by the bushel in their first eight games, but scored a total of only 19 points.

CLASS B SCHOOL TITLE AT STAKE TODAY

Dukes' Rado Makes Grid Ratings

By CHRISTY WALSH,
Member All America Board of Football
(Registered U. S. Patent Office)

This week we enter the home stretch of football's greatest sweepstake—the last drive for a place on the All-America teams! Eighty-four players have been designated so far this season, including the latest ratings listed below. By next week approximately 100 players will have been officially rated by the All-America Board and from that number 11 fortunate and deserving names will be selected for football's Hall of Fame.

From recent conversation with other members of the board, I know that at least three players . . . possibly four . . . are definitely assured of election. For the remaining seven positions, the fate of many candidates hangs in the balance, with today's games likely to strengthen or weaken the claims of many outstanding players. The Thanksgiving Day games also produced their stars and will be considered in the final ratings.

ONE MORE LIST

These are the next to last of the weekly ratings of the All-America Board of Football, from which the members will select their annual all-America team. The last list will appear next Saturday.

See tomorrow's issue for details of the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph's contest in connection with these selections. Ten beautiful all-America blankets will be awarded to the winners.

The following will receive Cards of Merit this week from the All-America Board of Football:

1—RADO, Duquesne (Guard)—Playing consistently on a victorious team all year, this hard-hitting lineman reached his best form in his final game. His charging was terrific; he recovered a blocked kick and two fumbles, one on his own goal line. (Keck, Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.)

2—M'CRACKEN, Detroit.—This 137-pound halfback—starring as a pinch hitter—scored both of Detroit's touchdowns against Michigan State. Replacing Knott, Detroit's injured ace, he carried the ball, passed and punted, one kick going 77 yards, over the goal line. Batchelor, Detroit.)

3—BURNS, Navy.—This lightweight guard—162 pounds—played 50 grueling minutes against the Army and was Navy's best all-round player in a close, hard game.

4—BESCO, Southern California. (End). By outwitting the Notre Dame secondary and outrunning the safety man, this tall, speedy Trojan took a 50-yard pass for a touchdown and throughout the game spilled the Notre Dame interference.

5—O'BRIEN, Nebraska. (Tackle). In the absence of Sauer, Nebraska's powerful back, Gayl O'Brien, 200-pound tackle, was outstanding on defense and offense. He repeatedly stopped Crayne and Laws, Iowa's remarkable backfield stars. (Wagner, Omaha Bee-News).

6—CHRISTIE, California. (Center). His diagnosing of plays and terrific charging into the interference were the highlight in the work of the powerful California line. The all-round play of this outstanding lineman had much to do with holding the enemy to a low score.

7—JOHNSON, University of Georgia. (Guard). This inexperienced sophomore stopped many Georgia Tech plays by consistently breaking through the line. The spirit and stamina of Johnson undoubtedly saved his team from defeat. (Coach Alexander, Georgia Tech).

8—KENT—Louisiana State. (Center). The anchor man in a comparatively light line, this Louisiana center was a great stumbling block on defense, repeatedly appearing in the opposition backfield and spilling the interference.

9—LEARCE—Baylor. (Quarterback). With the accuracy of a sharp-shooter, this great little quarterback threw seven passes in the 56-yard advance to win a close, hard-fought game. At the end of the passing attack, he bucked over the winning touchdown and put his team in the running for a Conference title.

10—WISTERT—Michigan. (Tackle). He was the outstanding player on the field in the Northwestern game. He smashed into Northwestern's backfield before plays were started. Wistert made tackles at line of scrimmage and behind the line. Offensively he as largely responsible for cutback runs by Everhardus and the holding of Northwestern's thrust at Michigan's goal was largely due to Wistert's personal defensive efforts. (Bud Shaver, Detroit Times.)

By JULIUS LEVIN

Offutt Field in Greensburg, the "graveyard" of championship football contenders, may be the scene of another startling upset this afternoon when East Pittsburgh High School and Mt. Pleasant High School battle for the class B championship of the Western Pennsylvania Interscholastic Athletic League.

Two powerful football elevens, both rated favorites in pre-game doping, met their Waterloos on the Offutt Field gridiron during the past eight days. Davis and Elkins College saw its winning streak shattered just one week ago today when St. Vincent College scored a convincing victory over the Scarlet Hurricane, while Greensburg upset the dope by handing Jeannette its first setback in two years.

POWERFUL TEAMS

Today's class B championship brings together two powerful football teams in East Pittsburgh, coached by Johnny Coleman, and Mt. Pleasant, tutored by Ned Culler.

Both teams enter the contest with only one defeat on their records, neither of which figured in the championship race. East Pittsburgh bowed to McKees Rocks in the season's opener, while Canonsburg defeated Mt. Pleasant. McKees Rocks and Canonsburg both are class A schools.

Greensburg, the same school that defeated Jeannette and is challenging New Castle for the championship in the class AA division, was held to a 6-6 draw by Mt. Pleasant early in the season.

TERRACEMEN WIN SIX

No class B school has succeeded in crossing the East Pittsburgh goal line this season. Coleman's eleven scored six successive victories against class B foes, defeating Freedom, East McKeesport, Elizabeth, Trafford, Edgewood and Glassport. Glassport was last year's co-champion in class B.

Nine victories, a tie and a defeat mark the Mt. Pleasant record for the season. The Culler boys defeated four class B teams in Ligonier, Youngwood, Leechburg and East Huntingdon, three class A schools in Connellsville, Scottdale and Hurst, and two non-league foes in Meyersdale and Derry Borough. They tied Greensburg and lost to Canonsburg.

Jayhawkers Play Second Fray of Week

WASHINGTON, Dec. 2.—(AP.)—Win, lose or draw, Kansas University's Jayhawkers were assured an "iron man" rating as they tackled the George Washington Colonials here today in their second game in three days.

Train schedules allowed the Kansans less than a six-hour "stretch" period between their arrival and game time at 2 o'clock this afternoon. The limbering up was sorely needed despite the comparative ease of the Jayhawkers' 27-to-0 victory over Missouri on Thanksgiving.

ARSENAL FACES TOUGH TASK

By TOM BIRKS

The Arsenal soccer club, undefeated leader of the Central Districe League, faces a tough assignment this afternoon as it meets the Aliquippa aggregation at the Ohio River grounds.

Other good games in the circuit find Old Carnegie traveling to Lawrenceville to meet the Dunwick Rovers; Beltzhoover tackling Clan Dougles at the Westinghouse High School Stadium, and the Pittsburgh Rovers battling Ambridge at the Bridge Works ground in Ambridge.

In the Panhandle League, Lincoln Hill goes to Houston and the Shannon Braves play at Beadling.

Tomorrow the big game of the day finds the Heidelberg and Morgan clubs squaring off at Greenlee Field for the third time in the first round of the National Open Challenge Cup competition. This battle is expected to draw a large crowd.

Terry to Box Smith at Arena

Young Terry, of Trenton, N. J., who recently received a referee's decision over Ted Yarosz at Newark, N. J., will make his first Pittsburgh appearance at the Arena, on the North Side, one week from Tuesday night. His opponent will be Jimmy Smith, of Philadelphia, who holds a victory over Lou Brouillard, former welterweight and middleweight champion.

Aultman Returns To Hospital Bed

BEAVER FALLS, Pa., Dec. 2.—Improper circulation in the leg he broke in the game with St. Vincents has forced Cliff Aultman, Geneva College's star four-letter athlete, back to the hospital.

Aultman was discharged from the hospital last week and it was hoped that he would be fit for duty with the Geneva basketball squad, of which he is captain.

CHILLYSAUCE

By CHILLY DOYLE

"Where is Earl Smith and what is he doing?"

That question has been asked this column so many times it is quite appropriate to devote some lines to the most colorful player to wear a Bucco uniform in the past 15 years. I am sorry I cannot give a complete account of Earl's activities, but wherever he goes he will be remembered by Pittsburgh fans.

The last report in Pittsburgh on Earl came from Rosy Ryan, former Giant pitcher, here with the Dodgers last summer. This was an Ozarkian echo to the effect that Earl would come out of his mountain fastness to pay a visit to the pitcher who was his buddie for many seasons under the McGraw banner. Ryan, by the way, has 101 good stories about Earl of the Ozarks.

Eddie Coll, assistant manager of the Schenley Hotel, has a memory of Smith that is interesting, if not altogether pleasant for Eddie to contemplate. Coll has been catering to the wants of major league players for many years and he states their behavior, as a rule, is as serene as the scenery around the Bellefield district. It might be mentioned that a troupe of 30 athletes in any big hotel give the proprietor little or no trouble.

Once in a while a player will engineer some prank, and then there was the startling act of the late John Peters, six-foot four catcher of the Phillies, who was strong enough to pull the home plate out by the roots. John became very thirsty on a very hot night and somebody told him of a "speak" in the adjacent neighborhood.

The beer was so good at this particular "speak" that Big John bought himself a keg of the frothy fluid and set out for the Schenley in a taxicab. You may well imagine the amazement of the evening-gowned guests upon John stepping into the elevator with a keg of beer on his shoulder. John had his beer that night, no mistake.

But to get back to Smith and Coll's experience. It seems that Earl wished to be close to the ball park after he joined the Pirates so he engaged quarters at the Schenley. In due time, McGraw and his Giants came to town. Now McGraw had taken something like $2,500 of Earl's money in fines and there was a bad feeling between them. Moreover, a dozen of the Giant players were ready to spring at the throat of Earl on account of the latter's riding tactics.

McGraw's espionage system included the services of the Negro trainer who was obligated to check in the Giants each midnight to make sure that training rules were being observed. One night the detective started in to do his task and through a mistake, or perhaps by force of habit, he rapped at and opened Smith's door. Earl heard him coming along the halls checking the players and when the detective looked in on Smith he was grabbed by the neck.

Earl pushed the scared Negro into a dark clothes closet and locked the door. Then he went for a walk. In about 10 minutes half of the Schenly's guests were wondering what had struck the place. McGraw finally arrived on the scene. When he learned the details of the skit he shouted to Coll:

"If you don't get that guy to h—l out of here while the Giants are in town, there is liable to be a crime committed in your hotel! It's either Smith or the Giants!"

So Smith moved the next morning.

SAVOLDI WINS IN OVERDONE MAT BOUT

By HARRY KECK,
Sports Editor.

The rasslers came very close to sounding their own death knell again in Pittsburgh last night as they hippodromed their way through a series of bouts at the Arena, on the North Side, with Joe Savoldi, erstwhile football hero at Notre Dame, one of the chief offenders, and the new boxing commissioner, Dr. William D. McClelland, sitting at the ringside and frowning eminously from time to time as the fans handed the performers raspberries.

The chances are orders will go out to the promoters to make the wrestlers wrestle or stay out of Pittsburgh.

Only one of the five bouts staged last night deserved to be considered as a wrestling exhibition. That was the semi-final, between Bert Rubi, of Hungary, and Bruno Sorrasini, of Italy, which was won by the former in 28 minutes 42 seconds of lively, acrobatic wrestling almost free of punching and cuffing and kicking and other unnecessary roughness. The fans enjoyed and applauded this bout while they scoffed at the others.

JOE WINNER, BUT—

Savoldi was outweighed by more than 50 pounds and his opponent, Jim Clinstock, towered over him and did almost all of the work and looked as if he could throw Joe any time he cared to, but Joe, of course, won. The end came after a little more than 28 minutes, when Clinstock backed against the ropes and rebounded into a head butt and fell flat on his back and allowed Joe to plump on top of him and pin his shoulders, to the accompaniment of the righteous boos of the onlookers.

Every trick of "showmanship" was resorted to in this bout. In the first place, Clinstock appeared in the ring with a second, who started off by holding up the bout in an argument with the referee; then Savoldi complained many times that the second was coaching from the corner, and at the finish the second made a show of demanding police protection for his man on the way to the dressing room. During the bout, Savoldi kept appealing to the referee on the slightest provocation, once complaining that his opponent was "breaking his arm." He was repeatedly staggering about, a pitiful spectacle of a conquering hero.

NAME DRAWS CROWD

Eli Fischer, of Brooklyn, won the decision over Bill Middlekauff in 30 minutes; Joe Malciewicz threw Sid Nabors with a body slam in 13 minutes, 32 seconds, and Emil Dusek won the decision over Tony Felice in 30 minutes. The early bouts featured a rope strangling act, in which the victim's head was knotted between the strands, which isn't wrestling in any man's language.

The lure of Savoldi's name drew a large crowd. It was announced that there will be another wrestling show at the Arena next Friday night. Another one also is billed Wednesday at Motor Square Garden, where the opener of the revival, week before last, was put on with some finesse compared with last night's crude exhibitions. Jim McMillen has been added to the Garden card for next week, against Karl Davis in the semi-final. Gino Garibaldi will be back in the main bout against Sun Jennings, Haskell Indian.

Harmeson Signed As Lehigh Coach

BETHLEHEM, Pa., Dec. 2.—(AP.)—Lehigh University's new football coach is Glen Harmeson, now backfield coach at Purdue.

City Handball League competition for today brings together early pace-setters in both sections of the loop. The class A card calls for Dick Koubek's Keystone crew to cross Third avenue for battle with Steve Myers and his Downtown Y. M. C. A. mates, the rival outfits being deadlocked for top position. Meanwhile Downtown Y, class B leader, invades the Keystone clubhouse for joust with the K. A. C. seconds.

Y. M. H. A., defending champion, visits P. A. A. in the upper sector in hope of retrieving ground lost through last Saturday's unexpected setback. The P. A. A. reserves meet Westinghouse Club in class B milling.

City League Secretary Dick Koubek announced late yesterday that a special invitation singles glove event will be reeled off on the Keystone courts from December 12 to 16. Entries will be limited to the capacity of a bracket of 16.

STOCK MARKET TRADING QUIET, NARROW

NEW YORK, Dec. 2.—(AP.)—Extremely narrow and quiet trading featured the early stock dealings today. Utilities were steady, American Telephone moving a shade higher. A number of industrial leaders ruled about unchanged.

Issues steady to slightly improved included General Motors, Cerro De Pasco, United States Steel, New York Central, National Distillers, Westinghouse and du Pont.

With the official price for domestic gold unchanged at $34.01 an ounce, the dollar displayed rallying tendencies at the opening of foreign exchange dealings. The British pound was off more than 1 cent at $5.18½ and the French franc eased nearly .01 of a cent at 6.14 cents. Other foreign currencies were moderately lower.

Owing to the attention which recently has been given to the market for government securities, the weekly Federal Reserve statement was read closely. The system's holdings of federal obligations rose $543,000 in the week ended Wednesday, which just about canceled the previous week's decrease. It was explained that the minor changes in the portfolio were due to repurchase agreements.

Member bank reserves declined some $14,000,000 in the week, while currency in circulation expanded $89,000,000, largely because of the Thanksgiving holiday requirements. With this seasonal advance, the volume of money was up to a new high since last July. Excess member bank reserves, it was stated, remained above the $800,000,000 level during most of November.

BROKERS' LOANS INCREASE

WASHINGTON, Dec. 2.—(AP.)—Loans to brokers and dealers held by weekly reporting New York city member banks amounted to $720,000,000 during the week ended November 29, the Federal Reserve Board reported today. The figure represented an increase of $22,000,000 for the week.

The loans for the week ended November 30, 1932, were $353,000,000. The board's detailed distribution of loans over the three weeks dealt with follow in millions of dollars:

	Nov. 29	Nov. 22	Nov. 30, '32
For own account..	$608	$584	$337
For account of out of town banks....	104	109	12
For account of others	8	5	4

GRAIN PRICES DIP SHARPLY

CHICAGO, Dec. 2.—Sharp new breaks in grain values early today followed reports of further rains in Kansas and Nebraska overnight. An unchanged quotation on gold at Washington, with British exchange weaker, was also construed as bearish. Opening ⅜@1 cent lower, wheat afterward underwent additional losses. Corn started ⅛@⅝ off and subsequently declined further.

Financial Topics

Government Financing Providing Key To Market

Those who have been following things closely are moved to express the opinion that the market is behaving much the same at present as it did prior to the treasury financing the middle of last October. Then preparations were in order for the conversion offered at that time to the holders of the fourth liberty 4¼s. Sound money reports were going the rounds and stocks merely drifted until the financing was out of the way and the gold buying program was instituted. Just now the situation is one where holders of stocks are disinclined to sell, and while largely bullish in their views, hesitate to add to commitments until terms of the treasury operation are out.

Sustained demand for short maturity bonds was reported a feature of yesterday's trading by close observers of the investment market. This inquiry involving high-grade corporate obligations has touched chiefly loans with a remaining life of one to as much as six years. Buying of such loans is a bit puzzling to the rank and file in investment circles in view of the persistent talk of steps toward inflation. Beyond evident effort to set the stage for the forthcoming new issue, domestic governments are not momentarily inclined to do much either way.

Persistent buying in Allied Chemical and Dye carried that stock forward to duplicate the year's high made a few weeks ago. One of the old line industrial leaders, Allied has shown independent strength on numerous occasions since the recovery movement from the October lows set in. Among the leaders in the chemical field, steady absorption of the stock marketwise, suggests the disposition on the part of traders to view Allied as occupying a position in which it must be sharing the benefits of better business that has paved the way for extra disbursements by several other units in the chemical line.

Another advance in yield rates offered on short-term bankers' acceptances proved an interesting development. This makes a cumulative advance of ⅜ of 1 per cent in the 90-day rate since the rising trend was initiated about a fortnight ago coincident with softening in the government bond market and the increased yields afforded in that direction. The latest change in bill rates is broadly interpreted as an indication that the acceptance market is included to anticipate a bit more competition from government securities, or in other words looks for a rather attractive offering in connection with the Treasury's December 15 fiscal operation.

DOLLAR QUIET IN LONDON

LONDON, Dec. 2.—(AP.)—The United States dollar moved within a range of 2 points on a quiet market today, closing at 5.18¾ to the pound, a point which was virtually unchanged from yesterday.

The seasonal trade demand for dollars tended to steady the rate while opposing factors were quiet.

The dollar closed yesterday at $5.18½ to the pound after having opened at the same price as today's opening.

PARIS, Dec. 2.—(AP.)—The weakness of the French franc because of the uncertainty regarding the cabinet resulted today in the advance of the American dollar to 16.32 francs (6.12 cents to the franc) after it had opened at 16.20 francs (6.7 cents) on a moderate market.

BERLIN, Dec. 2.—(AP.)—The United States dollar sold at 2.685 marks (37.25 cents to the mark) on the foreign exchange market today as compared with a price of 2.655 marks (37.28 cents) yesterday.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 2.—The Reconstruction Finance Corporation announces it will pay $34.01 an ounce for today's purchases of newly-mined domestic gold. This is unchanged, compared with Friday's quotation, and compares with the London price today of $32.40, based on sterling at $5.18.

OIL IN STOCK CUT SHARPLY

WASHINGTON, Dec. 2.—(AP.)—Secretary Ickes, oil administrator, today announced a reduction of 984,000 barrels in oil stocks as of November 25.

The Secretary reported that stocks of domestic and foreign crude oil reported by companies holding more than 100,000 barrels declined from 342,747,000 to 341,763,000 barrels in the November 18 to November 25 period.

Stocks of domestic crude totaled 339,163,000 barrels on November 25, a decrease of 784,000 barrels from the preceding week, while foreign crude fell 200,000 barrels to 2,600,000 barrels. Current import statistics recorded a decrease of 409,000 barrels in receipts of crude oil during the week.

Industry reports indicate that 2,360,000 barrels were refined, an increase of 15,000, over the daily average in the previous week. Stocks of motor fuel at refineries, bulk terminals and natural gasoline plants declined 170,000 barrels during the week.

Way Reported Clear For Spinelli Return

Lieut. Frank Ferris, of the homicide squad, today said December 27 had been tentatively set as the date when he and Assistant Chief James S. McGinley, of the county detectives, would sail for Italy to bring back Guiseppe (Big Mike) Spinelli to face trial charged with the Volpe brothers' massacre.

While no official notification has been received from the State Department, Ferris said that District Attorney A. T. Park at a conference yesterday had stated the way was clear for Spinelli's return. According to Ferris, Spinelli will be the first prisoner to be brought back to Pennsylvania from Italy on a murder charge.

Gandhi's Wife Must Serve Time

ANAND, India, Dec. 2.—(AP.)—Mrs. Mohandas K. Gandhi, who was arrested November 28 for refusing to leave this district and for planning to participate in a civil disobedience movement, will have to serve the remainder of a six months' sentence imposed August 8, the government decided yesterday.

The wife of the Mahatma was released two weeks after the sentence was pronounced to permit her to nurse her husband, who at that time was engaged in a protest fast.

BUSINESS

Wages vs. Living Costs Is Inflation Problem

By GEORGE H. SNYDER

This is the final article of a series on monetary problems.

THE FACTORS which inflation contributes to business upturn are quite obvious but many of the inequalities which take place during the process are responsible for serious difficulties—and are causing much trouble for the administration.

Inflation, as has been said before, increases the prices of commodities and of property. This makes it easier for the creditor to settle with his debtor. It stimulates productive activity and employment by making it more desirable to have capital in the form of property and current assets in the form of inventory than to have them in money.

But this rising tide of prices means that living costs will be higher. The wage-earner must pay more for everything he buys. The farmer must pay more for his tools, his clothes and the food which he does not raise himself. It is obvious that unless wages increase in line with retail prices and the prices of farm products increase in line with the cost of things that a farmer must buy that inflation will decrease buying power instead of increasing it. This would destroy the effect of other stimulating factors and a country undertaking inflation would be no better off than before it started.

Government Tries To Solve Problem

THIS PROBLEM explains many of the steps taken by the administration. Prices of wheat and cotton have been increased greatly by inflationary measures but there still is dissatisfaction in rural districts. The farmer is sore because the prices of things he must buy have gone up as much as the price of the things he sells and he feels he is no better off than he was before. Agricultural processing taxes represent an attempt to keep farm costs and farm income in a proper balance.

In urban centers the industrial codes and the NRA have been trying to accomplish a similar task in fixing minimum wages and maximum working hours so that employment can be expanded and there will be a general gain in national purchasing power.

While the administration has aided manufacturers in establishing costs which would permit a profit, it has been careful to prevent any run away movement of advancing prices.

* * *

Effectiveness Still To Be Demonstrated

UNFORTUNATELY THE science of economics is not yet reduced to a well-organized and proven system of laws. Theory is yet to be incontrovertably proven by practice. Collisions between theory and fact have made necessary several minor changes of administration policy. Just how many more changes may be necessary cannot be predicted.

Prophetic Sermon Series to Start

A series of prophetic sermons on the second coming of Christ will be given Sunday evenings during December in the Gospel Tabernacle of the Christian Missionary Alliance, Arch street, North Side, by the Rev. R. F. C. Schwedler. He will speak on "The World's Great Dilemma, the Reason and the Remedy," tomorrow evening.

Tomorrow morning the Rev. A. F. Reifsnyder, missionary from Peru, will talk on foreign missions. He will be accompanied by a Campa Indian boy he adopted in Peru after rescuing him from Indians who were about to bury him alive with his dead mother.

Volcanoes Erupt In Japan, Salvador

TOKIO, Dec. 2.—(AP.)—Ashes were scattered on nearby villages, said a report reaching here today, in an eruption of Mt. Tarumae, an active volcano on Hokkaido, northernmost of the main islands of Japan. A column of smoke 3,000 feet high arose. There were no casualties, according to dispatches from Muroran.

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador, Dec. 2.—(AP.)—Coffee plantations and livestock farms were covered by lava today after an eruption of the Izalco Volcano. Lava was reported to have spread to within a few miles of the town of Izalco.

Litvinoff, Farley Arrive at Naples

NAPLES, Dec. 2.—(AP.)—Flying the red flag, the liner Conte Di Savoia landed Russian Foreign Commissar Maxim Litvinoff here today after what he told newspapermen was an "excellent voyage" from the United States.

The same ship brought Postmaster General James A. Farley, American Democratic national chairman, who is on a brief vacation with his wife.

Wynn Willing to Spend $50,000 to Save $10

Universal Service.

NEW YORK, Dec. 2.—Ed Wynn, giggling comedian of stage, screen and radio, failed to get a laugh out of his exoneration on charges of beating up Morris Newman, a process server.

Wynn's manager, Fred Zweifel, also was acquitted yesterday, but his secretary, Albert Baron, was fined $10. Wynn ordered a copy of the minutes and told his counsel:

"If it costs $50,000 appeal the Baron ruling and beat that guy."

Newman charged that when he called at the Wynn apartment to serve the comedian with a summons, Baron, Wynn and Zweifel bundled him into an elevator and beat him. Baron admitted opening the door to process server, but Zweifel denied being present. Wynn, explaining his absence, said, while opposing counsel objected and spectators laughed:

"I was eating luncheon with my son, who is studying mechanical engineering. I just wanted to tell what he is going to be when he grows up."

STEEL OUTLOOK IMPROVING FOR 1934

By B. E. V. LUTY

For a third week the general tone of the steel market has improved. Sentiment is better and slightly higher forecasts are made of activity in the remainder of the year and early in the new year.

Coincident with this improvement in sentiment but not necessarily as either cause or effect there has been an increase in operations. Production of steel ingots in the two weeks through November 11 was officially forecast at 26.1 per cent and 25.2 per cent of capacity respectively, while the figures in the three week through this week run 27.1, 26.1 and 26.8 per cent respectively. In tonnage these three weeks average 5 per cent above the two weeks preceding. There was a small jump and now the trend seems to be slightly downward. The usual seasonal decline appears to have been avoided.

A dip in the last week or fortnight of the year to a point under the recent low would not be significant. It might be prevented by heavier shipments of finished products to customers taking advantage of expiring contracts but such shipments might be provided from stocks of ingots and semi-finished steel whereby the rate of ingot production might go down without a corresponding decrease in shipments.

NEW BUYING

Not in slightest degree has the recent small improvement in the trade been due to the appearance of new classes of buying. Railroad, building and automobile demand are dormant. Increased activity, at a time when ordinarily there is seasonal decrease, is on the part of the miscellaneous buyers who for a long time have represented almost the entire steel demand, excepting the automobile demand which recently passed out of season.

The trade has a clear view that the recent improvement, contrary to seasonal precedent, is a reflection of further liquidation of stocks of steel and manufactures of steel accumulated during the remarkable bulge in the summer. Presumably such stocks soon will be entirely exhausted, and as present ultimate consumption is evidently in excess of present steel production there should be some increase in demand by the miscellaneous lines.

TIN ACTIVE

Tin plate furnishes an exception to this generalization as on account of price conditions accumulation of tin plate and cans has been occurring later than in other steel products. The tin mills will have nearly full working time until the last week or two of the year and a marked lull is promised as shipments after December 31 must be on the new price basis of $5.25 a box, against $4.65 filed on August 29 and $4.25 as the general season price for this year.

No really large increase in demand from the present sources can be expected, because the present buyers are doing relatively well as it is. Production of steel ingots this week has been at about 18,000,000 tons a year, or two-fifths of average production in the very active seven-year period through 1929, when there was an average of 45,760,000 tons a year and building, the automobile industry, the railroads and mining and oil and gas accounted for 30,000,000 tons a year, leaving 15,750,000 tons for all other outlets, but those outlets are now taking by far the greater part of the steel now being produced at the rate of 18,000,000 tons a year.

AUTOS TO GAIN

The automobile industry will come in first. Production this year will probably total between 2,050,000 and 2,100,000 cars and trucks in the United States and Canada. An increase of one-fourth for 1934 is regarded as a conservative forecast, and that means that there would be added for the first quarter of the new year production of ingots at about 4,000,000 tons a year. With a little increase in the present miscellaneous demand there would be production at 25,000,000 tons a year, making a 37 per cent rate, to be raised by such increased demand as may come from the railroads, buildings and the oil and gas fields. Large increases in these lines are likely to be spread over a long period in the order named. The question has been asked when a 40 per cent rate may be struck and the best guess now seems to be some time in March.

Heavy melting steel scrap is quotable at $11 to $11.50, having slipped 25 cents in the week. In the first two months of the year the market was $8 to $8.50, which the trade regarded as unreasonably and absurdly low, while the high, in late July and early August, was $13.50 to $14.

Forbes

Shall Mankind, Miracle-Maker, Admit Defeat?

By B. C. FORBES

HOW PUNY and pale seems America's economic problem of the moment when we contemplate past achievements of Americans, of man!

IN BUT the tick of a clock in the lifetime of man on earth, this whole vast continent of ours has been transformed from the primeval to the foremost nation in the world.

Within the span of men now living, we have learned to construct buildings towering more than a thousand feet in the air, accommodating a population equalling that of all but our largest cities of one century ago.

Mr. Forbes

We have bored under the earth and sent trains rushing a mile a minute under our cities and under our rivers.

We have developed wing enabling us to fly from the Golden Gate to Manhattan in 10 hours and to circle the earth in little more than a week.

We can burrow more than a mile into the ground to explore for wealth—and ascend well over 10 miles towards the heavens to explore cosmic rays and other phenomena of science.

We can safely descend in ships into the depths of the ocean—and even create light and power by bringing cold water from the depths and mingling it with the warm water of the surface.

AMERICA opened the doors of her latest exposition, marking a "Century of Progress," by harnessing the light which emanated from a particular star (Arcturus) 100 years ago.

We can create lightning powerful enough to cause wreck and ruin—and to split atoms.

Thanks to an American, we can now talk by telephone, not merely with any human throughout the length and breadth of the continent, but to the inhabitants of the most distant parts of the globe.

We can sit at our own fireside and have transmitted to us, through television, pictures of men and events many miles away.

Into every hamlet has been brought the best of silent and spoken dramatic art through motion pictures.

From the air we can draw music and speech, not only from any part of our own land, but from across the oceans.

THROUGH the point of a steel needle we can regale ourselves with the finest singers, the masterpieces of our finest musicians, the playing of our finest orchestras.

We can create in home or office or factory any climate desired, from the genial warmth of the South to the frigid temperature of the Far North.

We can install far from human habitations, mechanical men ("robots") to perform a bewildering variety of intricate tasks.

We have transformed vast deserts into gardens and granaries capable of supporting millions of human beings.

We unleash machines in thousand-acred fields which cut, gather and convert growing stalks into grain ready for food, banishing man's aeon-long dread of starvation.

WE CAN feed raw materials into one end of a building and send them forth transmuted into vehicles at the rate of two every minute of the year, able to transport in luxury individuals and families at 60 miles an hour in any direction desired.

Think, too, of the human skill and the humane spirit which have given us anesthetics, cures for almost every form of disease, our hospitals, our Red Cross, our philanthropic organizations, our community chests, our richly endowed universities, our churches.

SHALL AMERICANS, who have achieved such miracles, supinely admit helpless inability to solve the relatively simple problem of evolving ways and means to distribute our abundance—our super-adbudance—of life's necessaries and comforts so that every individual and family in the land may have enough to enjoy at least the essentials of civilized existence from the cradle to the grave?

Government Again Purchases Bonds

WASHINGTON, Dec. 2.—The Treasury has begun moderate use of the sinking fund for purchase of government bonds in the open market, the Treasury daily condition statement reveals. A purchase of $1,137,000 is shown by the statement for November 28, the latest statistics available, with the sinking fund now standing at $5,187,000, as compared to $4,050,000 for the previous day. This is the first instance in several weeks that a purchase has been made for the fund.

BRITISH BANK STUDY PLAN SCRUTINIZED

By MERRYLE S. RUKEYSER
Universal Service.

NEW YORK, Dec. 2.—The new MacMillan report on Canadian banking and the current hearings at Washington of the subcommittee of the Committee on Banking and Currency suggest national difference in approaches to complex subjects like finance.

Mr. Rukeyser

In the British Empire there has grown up the practice of expert and considered surveys by royal commissions. This is the technique of quiet scholarship, and its merit lies in an effort to get a well-rounded view of a situation.

The American Congressional investigation substitutes the lay jury methtod for the jurisprudence of specialists. It lays great emphasis on scandalous incidents and may be weak on giving a comprehensive picture of the elements of strategy as well as the defects.

'KID GLOVE' APPROACH

On the other hand, it may be argued that the British method is a kid glove approach, with perhaps too much deference for the prejudices and vested rights of stuffed shirts and others. Yet not a few of the royal commission reports have been impartial, courageous, and have laid the basis for informed change. The British MacMillan report of June, 1931, was an especially valuable document, and its candor regarding window dressing by British banks and other practices may have quickened the outflow of foreign funds, which hastened Britain's departure from the gold standard the following September.

After the sub-committee of the Senate Committee on Banking and Currency finishes its fact-finding survey, it would be enormously valuable to synthesize the findings in the manner of a royal commission report.

A committee of competent men, appointed either by Congress or the President, could be useful not only in summarizing the evidence given, but also in amplifying it by independent research and study.

The majority of the members of the MacMillan Commission for Canada suggest the creation of a central bank for the Dominion. Incidentally, bills are pending in New Zealand and India for the creation of central banks.

In view of the attack by Winthrop W. Aldrich, head of the Chase National Bank, on the American Federal Reserve policy, starting in the summer of 1927, which led to an excess of reserves and which brought about "a great increase in commercial bank credit, unneeded by commerce," generating an immense speculation in real estate and securities, it is interesting to consider the commission's delineation of the true function of a central bank.

DEFINES CENTRAL BANK

The MacMillan report points out:

"It is easily possible to expect either too much or too little of central bank action. A central bank is at the same time an instrument and a force. As an instrument it is the means by which the state—which must necessarily retain ultimate sovereignty in matters affecting the currency—can give effect to the national policy.

"As a force the central bank has certain powers in its keeping which can be used to achieve the ends of national policy. Clearly these powers are of differing efficacy according to the aim of the policy. A central bank cannot be expected to influence directly the price of a particular commodity. It is even not desirable that a central bank should be specifically charged with any responsibility for the general price level of a country. There are many factors, of varying nature, which combine to influence that level, and a central bank, working as it does purely in the monetary sphere, cannot be expected to have complete control, though it may well have a measure of influence. If it attempted to exercise any drastic control it would have to wield powers far beyond those which any body, other than the sovereign authority, would be entitled to exercise.

"It is manifest, however, that the regulation of the volume of credit is an important factor in influencing the level of economic activity and therefore of prices and this is one of the cardinal tasks of a central bank. In the absence of a central bank it is a task the fulfillment of which is either left to chance, or performed inadequately by other agencies. The regulation of the quantity of credit is effected by the action of the central bank on the reserves of the commercial banks. By increasing or diminishing these reserves, or by increasing the cost of securing them, there is set in motion a process of expansion or contraction through the ordinary channels of banking. A central bank is thus not a competitor with the commercial banks. Its functions are regulatory and indirect."

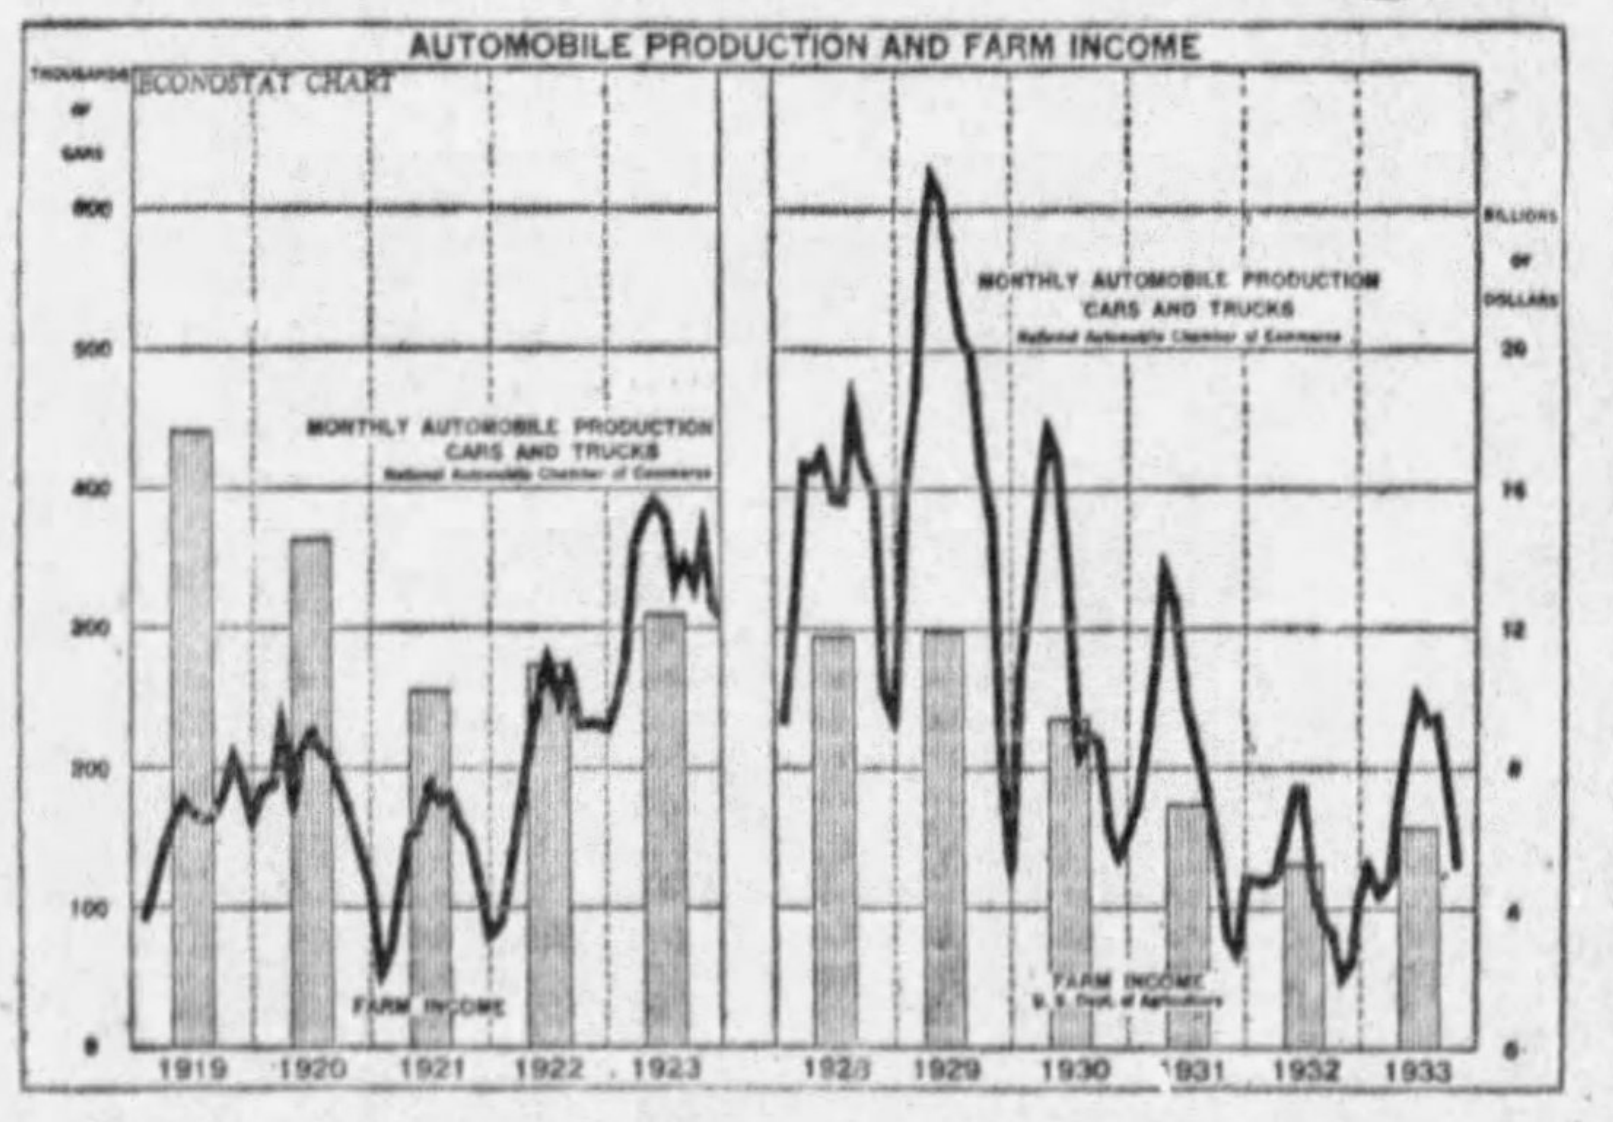
Farm Income Affects Automobile Output



By JOSEPH STAGG LAWRENCE,
Editor, The Econostat

This chart offers a comparison of automobile production and farm income for the period 1919-1923 and 1928-1933. It shows automobile output starting on its great postwar expansion, reaching its peak in the year 1929. It may be noted that automobile production, in spite of the unexampled severity of the past four years, at its lowest did not drop far below the point reached in the first part of 1921. In fact, in relation to the level touched in the previous depression, automobile output may be regarded as one of the more vigorous statistical series.

For the first time since the decline in 1930 the early summer peak for the current year is above that for the previous year. This ends the sharp saw-tooth decline covering the four-year period 1929-1932. If the new deal realizes but a part of its promises this first tooth covering 1933 may be the start of a long, jagged recovery line.

It is of some interest to note that this four-year period, 1929-1932, is the first in which four successive yearly declines in production have taken place. Up to 1929 and for a period of 25 years, automobile production had followed a very regular sequence, two years of improvement and one year of relapse.

The experience of the past four years has forced automobile statisticians to revise their expectations of performance. The bars representing farm income are placed in the background because farm prosperity has a very definite direct effect upon sales of automobiles. A great deal of the strength in retail sales during the summer and early fall has been due to improved buying in rural areas.

This, in turn, has been a direct reflection of improved farm income. As these bars rise they will undoubtedly bring with them an increase in automobile purchases.

WESTERN RAILS CUT RATES

NEW YORK, Dec. 2.—(AP.)—Western railroads put into effect today the sweeping reductions in passenger fares adopted last October. Roads in the eastern territory, including New England, continue to maintain the old base rate of 3.6 cents per mile, and thus for the first time in many years the country's carriers are without a uniform passenger fare structure.

The new tariff in western territory allows for adjustments by the individual roads, with a range from 2 to 3 cents a mile.

Under the new schedule any road in the western territory may institute a rate of 2 cents a mile for one-way travel in day coaches only. The adoption of this rate is not compulsory but is left to the discretion of the managements.

In the southeastern territory, no agreement had been reached regarding a cut in rates, but a number of the larger system have been operating under 3 and 2-cent coach fares.

Louisville and Nashville initiated the reduction early this year. Atlantic Coast Line, Florida East Coast and other carriers in the territory have petitioned the Interstate Commerce Commission for permission to cut the Pullman rate to 3 cents and the coach rate to 2 cents.

DRAVO OFFICIAL IN DEATH TRIAL

International News Service.

CHARLESTON, W. Va., Dec. 2.—Edward Weir, superintendent of the Dravo Contracting Company of Pittsburgh, was on trial in Federal Court today, charged with manslaughter in the death of six workmen who were buried under a slide of earth during construction of a dam at Marmet.

Federal jurisdiction was asserted by Judge George W. McClintic when a jury trying Weir in Kanawha County Circuit Court failed to agree. The case is based upon the government's allegation that Weir's company "did not exercise sufficient care in protecting the lives" of workmen.

DOLLAR FLIGHT ARGUMENTS REVIEWED

By LEWIS HANEY,
Professor of Economics, New York University.

NEW YORK, Dec. 2.—The dollar is being reduced in value as compared with gold and foreign currencies, as is seen in the rising quotations for gold and for pounds sterling.

Bondholders are concerned about the value of dollar bonds as is seen in weakness of all high-grade bonds which are not convertible into stock.

Are those who are "flying" from the dollar and transferring their funds into gold abroad or foreign currencies, justified in their fears of the dollar?

Are those who are selling bonds warranted by the facts?

HELP TO CREDIT SEEN

These are important questions which we should weigh well. Two arguments have recently been put forth which maintain that the flights from the dollar and from dollar bonds is not justified. They are as follows:

1—Every ounce of gold purchased and every cent of devaluation increases, not decreases, the fundamental base for a sound money-credit system.

2—No holder of cash or bonds has any just complaint if prices return to the 1926 level, since that level represents the average price at which most of our debts were contracted, and bondholders were satisfied in 1926.

It is also argued that at 1926 prices bonds would be more secure.

Like many problems in economics, there are considerations on the other side. In this case, we find people reasoning as follows:

As to buying gold and depreciating the dollar, they say the nation does not need more gold—that we already have more than our share of the world's gold.

They not only ask why, since we have so much gold, we do not return to the gold standard; but also ask why we do not keep the dollar as valuable as formerly, since we are actually increasing our already large gold base.

They argue the additional ounces of gold being bought now do not strengthen our "fundamental base," because we are not on a gold standard, and have no assurance that we will be. They ask, how can gold buying strengthen the money base if we do not know that it will be used for the purpose?

Again they argue that it is probable that if we do return to gold, the standard dollar will be smaller and have less purchasing power. So they insist on selling dollars as long as the present dollar is bigger than the smaller gold dollar to be expected in the future.

DOUBTFUL TO CONTROL

As to bonds and 1926 prices they argue on the other side as follows:

1—Assuming that prices can be raised to 1926 levels, can they be stopped there? How do we know that inflation can be controlled?

2—Some say, we bought our bonds before the war, or in the last year or two. What about us?

3—Others say we were not satisfied in 1926, but we held our bonds through 1926 and later because we confidently expected the usual ups and downs of the business cycle, and looked forward to just such a restoration.

We are prepared to hold our bonds now if we are subjected to only the risks of business and gold money fluctuations. But if now our dollars are to be cut in two permanently, we will sell our bonds now for 75 cents or 90 cents on the dollar and perhaps buy 50-cent-dollar bonds later.

4—They say, we do not believe prices, if let alone, will rise to 1926 levels, but if they should rise naturally without artificial dollar depreciation, we could at least protect ourselves.

If prices just "returned" to 1926, they would do so gradually and as a result of improving business. The bond market would not be loaded with increasing government issues.

These are some of the arguments on both sides. There has been of late considerable flight from the dollar as the government itself has sold dollars, and bondholders are worried. Are they right?

Dividend Notices

INTERNATIONAL PETROLEUM COMPANY, LIMITED.
NOTICE OF DIVIDEND NO. 39.

NOTICE is hereby given that a dividend of 28 cents Canadian currency per share has been declared, and that the same will be payable on or after the 15th day of December, 1933, in respect to the shares specified in any Bearer Share Warrants of the company of the 1929 issue upon presentation and delivery of coupons No. 39 at:

The Royal Bank of Canada,
King and Church Streets Branch, Toronto,
Canada.

The payment to shareholders of record at the close of business on the 30th day of November, 1933, and whose shares are represented by registered certificates of the 1929 issue, will be made by cheque, mailed from the offices of the company on the 14th day of December, 1933.

The transfer books will be closed from the 1st day of December to the 15th day of December, 1933, inclusive, and no bearer share warrants will be "split" during that period.

The income war tax act of the Dominion of Canada having been amended, effective April 1st, 1933, to provide that a tax of 5% shall be imposed and deducted at the source on all dividends payable by Canadian debtors to nonresidents of Canada, the above mentioned tax will be deducted from all dividend cheques mailed to nonresident shareholders and the company's bankers will deduct the 5% tax when paying coupons to or for account of nonresident shareholders. Ownership certificates will be required by the paying bankers in respect of all dividend coupons presented for payment by residents of Canada.

Shareholders resident in the United States are advised that a credit for the 5% Canadian tax withheld at source is allowable against the tax shown on their United States federal income tax return. If it is desired to claim such credit the United States tax authorities require evidence of the deduction of said tax. In order to secure such proof ownership certificates (form No. 601) must be completed in duplicate and the bank cashing the coupon will endorse both copies with a certificate relative to the deduction and payment of 5% tax, and return one certificate to the shareholder. If forms No. 601 are not available at local United States banks they can be secured from the company's office or the Royal Bank of Canada, Toronto.

Here Are the Simple Rules

Every day we will publish an unfinished rhyme. Read these Christmas Shopping Hint ads and select an article from these ads to use in making your own last line. Then clip this square, fill in your line, or write the whole rhyme on a piece of paper and mail to the Want Ad Contest Editor, Sun-Telegraph, giving, at the same time, the name of the dealer from whose ad you made the selection.

The best rhyme on each day's contest, judged from the points of originality, neatness and accuracy, will win a $5.00 merchandise order on any advertiser in the Christmas Shopping Hints which the winner may select. The second best $2.00 and the next three best $1.00 each. Two prizes of $5.00 each will be given on each of the last two days of the contest.

Answers to today's contest must be in our hands by 4 P. M., Monday, December 4.

In case of a tie duplicate awards will be made. You need not buy anything to compete and all persons are eligible except Sun-Telegraph employees and their families.

The Girl Who Won

By MAY CHRISTIE

CHAPTER XLVI.

"I swear that it was the same girl, Tony," said Ted White, when he and Jack and Tony found themselves alone at last in the little sun parlor.

"Well, what of that, even if it's true?" Tony asked savagely.

"Spoken like an Irishman, bravo!" cried Jack, who had consumed his third cocktail.

Marriage had irked him, but the liquor heartened him.

"Shut up, you fool!" said Tony, "and as for you, Ted White, I didn't ask for your opinion!"

Synopsis

Nollie Day, stenographer at an exclusive hotel, is befriended by wealthy Mrs. Judson, a widow. Nollie goes to a theater in place of Mrs. Judson, where she meets handsome Tony O'Brien. She reveals her own identity but Tony does not hear her. Next day, Tony telephones and learns Mrs. Judson has gone abroad. Nollie wants to clear her identity, but is unable to get in touch with Tony. Mrs. Judson returns and ask Nollie to become her secretary and visit her ranch. Nollie accompanies Mrs. Judson to a garden party and meets Rhoda Vane. Rhoda seems to dislike Nollie. Nollie and the widow leave for the ranch after inviting Rhoda. Nollie is surprised when she meets Tony near the ranch. Tony is pleased when she tells him she is not Mrs. Judson. Rhoda visits the ranch. She is rude to Nollie, but plainly tries to gain Tony's favor. Tony confesses that he loves Nollie. Jack Brilling and his bride are on a honeymoon near the Judson place. Brilling's bride is angry when she learns that Nollie is so near.

Now Go On

"But you're sweet upon this girl and I thought you ought to know she's a damn little liar!"

Tony made a spring at him. A glass smashed noisily.

"Hold on. Bad luck! That's an ill omen!"

Tony halted, being a superstitious Irishman.

"It wasn't meant to be, old chap," cried Jack. "Make love to her if you want to—but for heaven's sake don't marry the woman!"

"I'll marry whom I darn well please and I don't need any advice from you—"

But Ted White was in an obstinate mood. He repeated the story.

"I thought she was a little blackmailer, by gad! She was thick as thieves with Daffy Delatour—but when I tried to kiss her she up and did a jiu-jitzu!"

"Miss Day declared she'd never seen you in her life before."

"Well, wouldn't she, naturally?"

JACK ANNOYED

Jack had to separate the combatants again. He began to weary of pugilistic Tony.

"Look here, cut out the rough stuff, and be yourself, can't you? I know Miss Day quite well. A nice enough little girl, but no blessed plaster saint."

Jack Brilling spoke thickly. He was a little bit drunk.

Marriage had tired him in the last few days. He wished to heaven he were free again!

He was annoyed with Tony O'Brien.

Couldn't that fellow keep quiet? Why wave his feeling for this girl like the red rag of a toreador?

It annoyed Madeleine . . . and Rhoda . . . and himself. If he wanted to have an affair with pretty Nollie, why not be discreet about it?

"I've got to give a return party for the Brillings," announced Mrs. Judson to Nollie some days later.

Nollie was silent. She was worried, too, because things hadn't gone too well with her and Tony.

The lie lay on her mind. Many times in the past few days she wanted to make a clean breast to him.

But he valued truthfulness in the girl he loved—enormously—being an Irishman.

Were she to admit the lie, would Tony ever trust her again?

She was "distraite" with him—unnatural.

BUSY DAYS

Moreover, Mrs. Judson had kept her pretty constantly at work on the new book. There hadn't been many opportunities for a tete-a-tete in solitude with Tony.

Rhoda Vane had taken advantage of this, and had often been down to his shack by the lake.

She had extended her visit longer than the initial week of her invitation.

"I can't DRIVE her out. She's got a hide as thick as an ox!" had declared Mrs. Judson.

So Rhoda, in her own mind, was making hay while the sun shone—and Nollie was cloistered with Mrs. Judson's life-history.

In novel form. If it hadn't been for thoughts of Tony, Nollie would have enjoyed the work enormously.

She polished Mrs. Judson's phrases cleverly.

A flair for writing had this girl. She had a good vocabulary and a fine turn of sentence.

She worked hard. The book grew a-pace.

"I've GOT to give some sort of a party for these people," repeated her employer.

"Yes? I'll help you in any way I can," said Nollie, uncertainly.

"We'll make it a fancy dress dance. I can get an orchestra from Montreal. We may as well do the thing decently," said Jinny.

She added, tentatively: "There's a crowd at Runners' Rest I can invite——" (Runners' Rest was the ranch nearest them).

PARTY ARRANGED

"And at Rinkoko Lake I have some friends. They can easily motor over. And at the Windsor Hotel, in Montreal, there'll be half a dozen pals of mine on their way back to New York from Europe."

So the invitations were sent out, two days ahead. And Jinny did a lot of telephoning.

"Let's make it a 'Lovers of History' ball? We'll have a lot of fun."

Nollie presently warmed up herself. It would be wonderful to dance with Tony . . .

"What shall I go as?" She racked her brains over a costume.

"You must not tread on Rhoda's toes, nor yet on Madeleine's. Both of them have their knife in you already," warned Jinny.

She added: "I've the loveliest white wig and period gown I can loan you. You can go as Du Barry."

Nollie considered this. The role was scarcely in keeping with her part as secretary.

But these women had antagonized her. WHY should she consider them? Why not take what the gods and generous Mrs. Judson gave her?

She tried the white wig on, the lovely Louis XIV gown. They became her tremendously.

"Rhoda intends to go as Helen of Troy, or Cleopatra, because then she can wear the minimum of clothes," laughed Mrs. Judson. "I'M afraid Rhoda will hardly look respectable. She fancies herself enormously as a siren."

But Nollie paid no heed to what parts the other women chose. She would be glorious herself. She would mind her own business.

She kept her role from Tony too.

He would surely revel in her beauty?

Meanwhile it was her own secret.

The Beauty Box

By HELEN FOLLETT

With so much wailing and weeping going on because of beauty griefs it does seem harebrained to toddle round with stockings crinkled and hosiery seams doing drunken ziz-zags. As long as the intelligence functions it should be mindful of the fact that it ought to keep socks pulled up. Round garters are not only useless and unreliable, but they are one reason why many a woman becomes fatigued after even a short walk. Circulation is interfered with. We are all agin garters. Hose supporters are on the job. There should be three pairs of them, two anyway. An old saying is to the effect that a woman and a horse should be well harnessed. 'Tis true.

Some hair falls all the time, so a few threads in the hair brush are no cause for worry. A hair will live for two years, maybe for six, then will fluff off to give way to a new shaft. One reason why brushing is helpful to the growth is that it snakes out old-timers that have served their term of usefulness and are ready for retirement.

Don't fall down on the nightly scalp massage. Whatever stimulates the blood streams will make hair look happier, be more well behaved. Before the shampoo give the tresslocks a vigorous brushing. This treatment removes surface dust and plucks out dead shafts that have filled their term of office and are ready to flit.

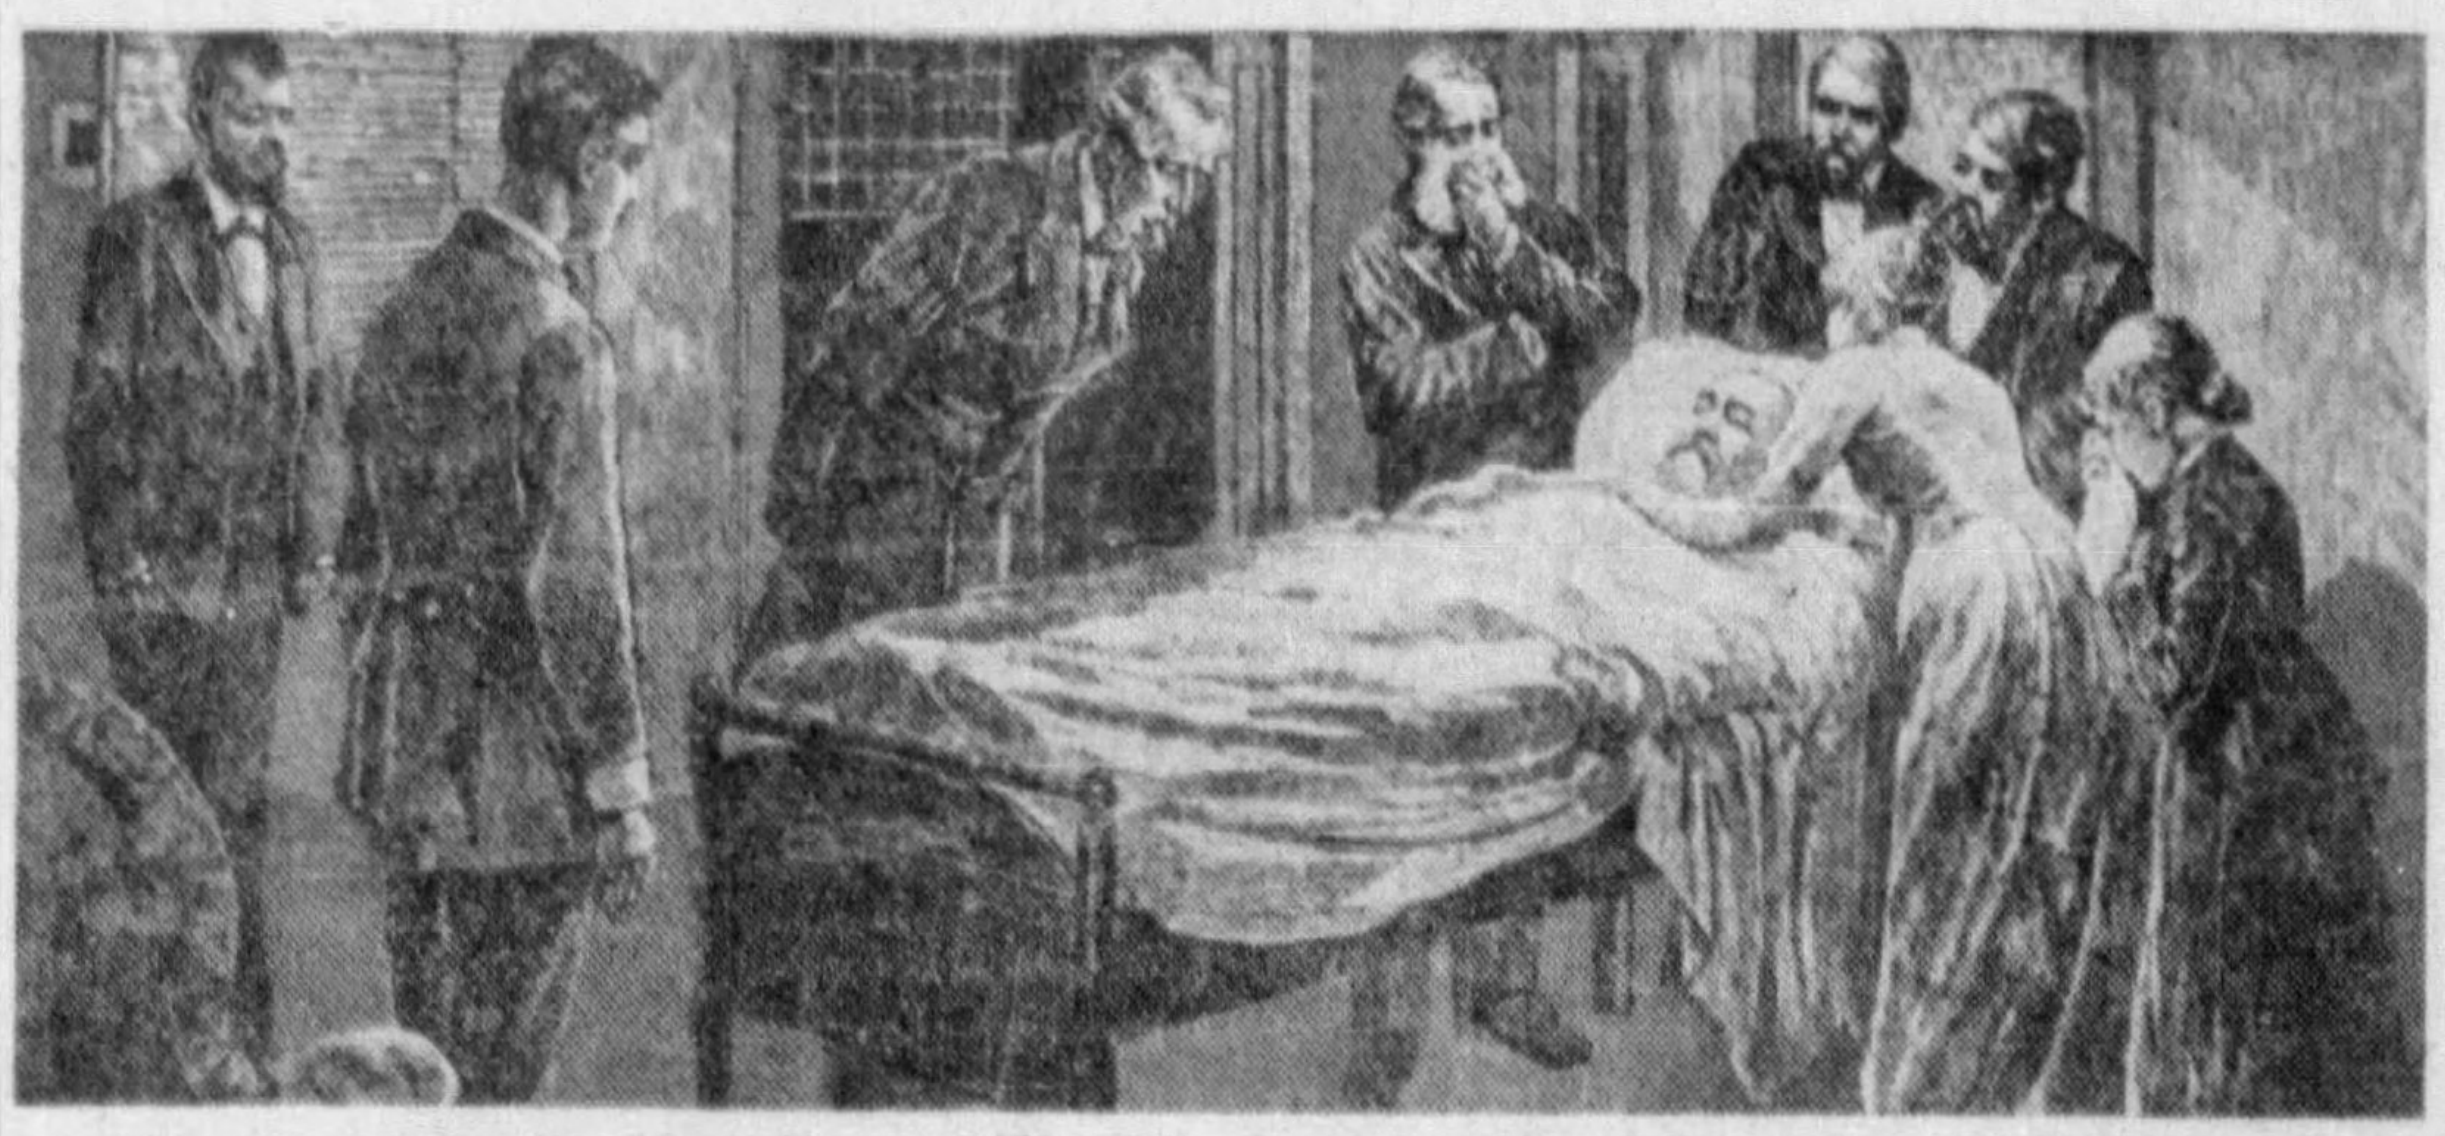
President Garfield Dies, Victim of Assassin Guiteau



The compromise President Hayes (1877-1881) inherited serious troubles. The Granger (farmer) movement demanded inflation in order to provide more money for crops. New silver discoveries in the West devaluated silver, making it unsuitable for currency. Farmers were fighting high railroad rates; railroads were facing bankruptcy in "cut throat competition" for trade of the big enterprises; they underpaid their employes, who rioted. Office seekers with political pull added to his other embarrassments. Bland Allison Act, passed (1878) over veto, restored silver, at 16 to 1, as currency backing. The pledge to buy $24,000,000 worth of silver annually resulted in losses for government.

Unsupported by a hostile Congress, Hayes had no chance for re-election in 1880. James A. Garfield, a Civil War general, was elected, only to be mortally wounded July 2, 1881, by an office seeker, Charles G. Guiteau. The President died on September 19.

This murder finally aroused Congress to constructive measures under President Arthur, the former Vice President. (U. S. History)

Coronation of Victoria as Queen of Great Britain (1838)

Painting by C. R. Leslie

French revolts against oppression in the 18th and 19th centuries influenced England also. The conservative Tories lost out and the progressive Whigs came to power (1830), introducing reforms and extending franchise (1832).

Amidst such peaceful revolution, King William IV died and his 17-year-old niece, Princess Victoria ascended the throne of England (1837). (World History)

AMERICAN ELM, A MOST MAGNIFICENT TREE

The genus Elms (Ulmus) with 15 species belongs to the Nettle family (Urticaceae). One species, the American elm, is one of the most beautiful trees of the temperate zone. Its leaves are alternate, double-toothed, straight-veined; flowers are in clusters of three or four on drooping stalks, perfect with greenish calix, reddish anthers, green styles. Fruit is an oval samara on slender stalk consisting of flat winged seed. Range: New Foundland-Texas. It prefers rich moist land. Its wood is heavy, hard, strong, durable; it is used for railway ties, posts, cooperage, implements. (General Science)

SNAIL

MOLLUSCA, SOFT BODIED ANIMALS

Mollusca, the 11th animal phylum (about 60,000 species) include clams, oysters, shrimps, snails, octopi, etc. Some of them live on land, most in the ocean, as scavengers. Clams, oysters, shrimps, are important food; some mussels furnish the valuable pearl. Molluscs are bilaterally symmetrical, unsegmented animals, mostly living within hard shells. Except those in bivalved shells (clams, oysters, etc.) they have heads with mouth, tentacles and eyes. The nervous system consists of three pairs of ganglia connected by cords. The liver is large and attached to the stomach, and the blood circulation system includes heart (with ventricle and auricle), arteries, veins, kidneys and gills. Above are diagrams of clam and snail. CADE AND LORD SAY IN KING HENRY VI (Part II)

King Henry VI (Parts I, II and III) are three historical dramas doubtfully credited to Shakespeare. Part I sketches the events leading to the fatal Wars of the Roses. The brave Talbot, Exeter, savage York and Warwick fight the French. Joan of Arc is misrepresented as a charlatan. Part II presents Margarete, wife of the nerveless King Henry VI, as the leading character who conspires with Suffolk and Buckingham against the life of the Protector, Duke Humphrey. Suffolk is killed during an uprising of the people, the rebellion of Jack Cade, shown above as Cade condemns Lord Say to be beheaded. Part III dramatizes the horrible murders by Gloucester (afterward Richard III), the imprisonment and assassination of Henry VI and the seating of Edward, Gloucester's brother, on the throne. PIG IRON

CUPOLA FURNACE

The product of the blast furnace, pig-iron (below, left), is the raw material for cast iron, steel and wrought iron. Cast iron is made in the cupola furnace (above), where the pig-iron is charged in layers with coke; air is blown in through tuyeres, the carbon content reduced to 2½-3%, the molten cast iron collecting in the crucible. It is then tapped into ladles and poured into sand moulds to form articles not exposed to tensile stresses or shocks, cast iron being brittle.

If it is cooled slowly, the carbon separates from cast iron in graphite flakes, giving the gray cast iron. Cooled suddenly (e. g. in metallic moulds) most of the carbon is left in carbide (cementite, Fe3C), giving the highly crystallized, hard and brittle white cast iron. (Chemistry)

The Professor Looks at Fish

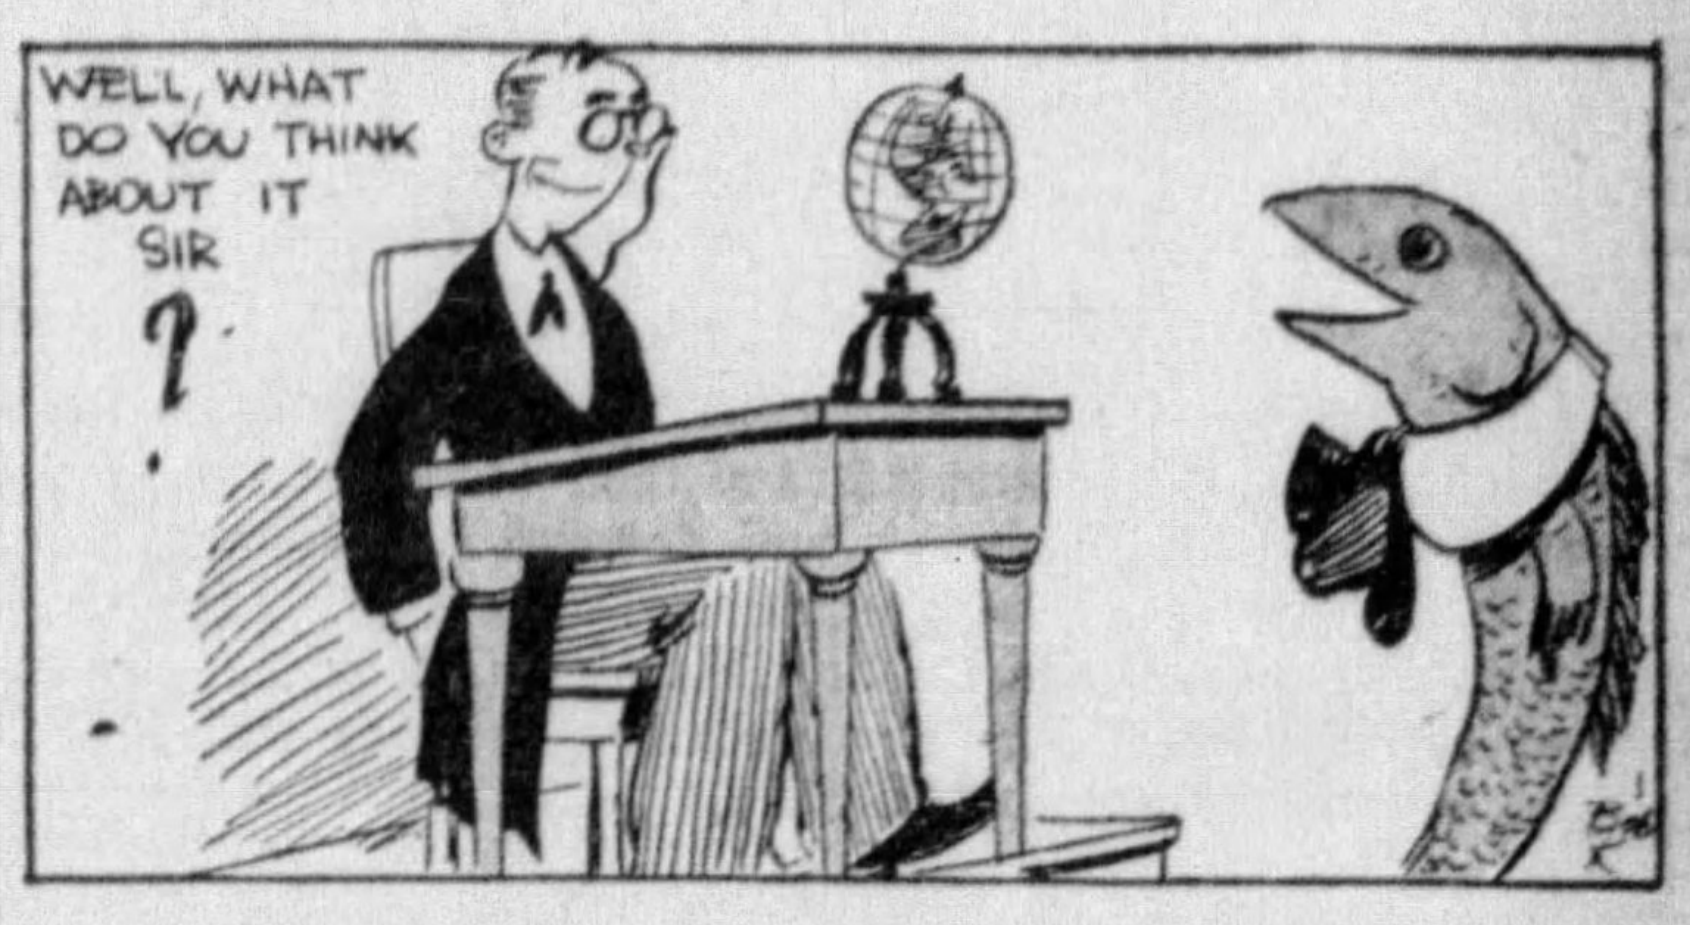
Scientist has discovered that fish can think. All we can say about this experiment is that you can't waste a fish's time.

The contest was shared with the midnight snack known as the sardine whose motto is every picnic a clinic.

The tests and questions employed were those commonly used in cross-hatching an applicant for insurance. When the professor snapped his fingers the sardine swam in circles. When the professor whistled a gay tune the sardine increased the cadence. It was a perfect seance and as easy as saddling a dead mule.

This deep expedition into piscatorial cerebrums came to the end of its endowments when the professor's wife walked into the room and caught the prof and the fish gazing at one another in frank astonishment.

We have known goldfish which apparently thought. We trained Bertrand the Eleventh to rise to the surface and snap at a generous crumb held lightly between thumb and forefinger. He scooped it up like a midget carpet sweeper.



WELL, WHAT DO YOU THINK ABOUT IT SIR

But that was habit. And is not thinking. Any animal can be taught parlor magic. We hate to throw cold water in the professor's Saturday night tub, but no reporter has ever got a statement from the winner of the turtle derby.

Dogs and hosses can be trained to an uncanny fineness of perception, gratitude and friendliness. But keep them out of class rooms. The highest reward we can give the fish tutor is a chair in Lake Erie. If he thought the fish was thinking then the fish was thinking that one of them ought to be bright.

The professor may be correct if the fish is psychic. We can picture the prof communing with the intelligent sardine. It gives us an idea of what kind of home work they are doing these collegiate days.

We do not close the discussion with a well-balanced sneer nor drench it in surface-scratching scorn. If the sardine has a friend we will step out any night with the professor. We would like to see the experiment working before we condemn any of the active participants.

It's a date, professor. But don't forget the sardines. We can always chart their reflexes and mental whirls between insulated sheaths of rye bread.

Death of R. B. Mellon

Pittsburgh Has Lost a Loyal Citizen—Brief Comments On Local News Items.

In the death of Richard B. Mellon Pittsburgh has lost a citizen who took pride in being a Pittsburgher and who did much for the advancement of the city. He will be remembered not only for the great industries that he helped to create, but also for his work in the promotion of civic beauty. It was Mr. Mellon's gifts that made possible the beautiful new Mellon Institute and the East Liberty Presbyterian Church.

Unlike other multimillionaires who, after making fortunes here, spent the later years of their life elsewhere, Mr. Mellon remained in Pittsburgh and devoted himself actively to the improvement of the community. He served, for example, as chairman of the County Planning Commission, and in that capacity was alert in combating projects which he thought would mar the city's beauty.

Pennsylvania is happy in being prepared for the repeal of prohibition. Gov. Pinchot and the Legislature have done good work in putting through a liquor law which bars the return of the old saloon. Another thing that must be guarded against is a return of the old system under which breweries subsidized places dispensing beer and other alcoholic beverages.

Pennsylvanians who approve of temperance—and there are many foes of prohibition in their number—should oppose vigorously any move by the brewers to pay for leases, equipment and furnishings for clubs, hotels and restaurants that are to sell alcoholic drinks. Eternal vigilance must be maintained to prevent not only this, but other developments of kindred nature having for their object the restoration of the saloon.

Public sentiment is almost solidly in favor of the anti-narcotic laws, and the news that a number of arrests have been made in Pennsylvania cities in connection with the forgery of prescriptions for forbidden drugs will be hailed with satisfaction. H. V. Smith, chief of the State Health Department's narcotic bureau, announces still other prosecutions will soon be instituted. Here is a governmental activity that is well worth while.

Many of our agents of government are producing nothing of value to the public. They are loafers whose "services" might well be dispensed with. The people of Pennsylvania, and of Allegheny County in particular, could save much of the money they are paying to these political loafers if they would consolidate townships, boroughs and counties formed in oxcart days and now superfluous.

We look hopefully to the new city administration that is to be inaugurated next month for some steps in the direction of eliminating unnecessary offices. The city and county tax assessment boards should be consolidated, for one thing, and many of the welfare activities of the city and county might also be merged to advantage.

The taxpayers of numerous boroughs would find it profitable, we believe, to unite with adjoining boroughs. There is no compelling reason why in this thickly settled county with its homogeneous population and excellent transportation facilities we should have four cities, 66 boroughs, 53 townships and 104 school districts, with the army of officeholders that are called for by hundreds of independent municipalities.

How unnatural it is to have so many separate municipalities in a single community is indicated by the fact, alluded to by Dr. Solon J. Buck, director of the Historical Society of Western Pennsylvania, in his radio address yesterday, that in a United States Census report for 1930 the name Pittsburgh is given to a great metropolitan district embracing most of Allegheny County and parts of Washington, Fayette, Westmoreland and Beaver Counties.

That the people appreciate that it is expensive and inefficient to maintain so many separate municipalities and so many sets of officeholders was demonstrated rather convincingly, we think, in the recent election, when the constitutional amendment authorizing the federation of all these independent units into a single city carried Allegheny County by a vote of 145,217 to 99,160.

It is to be hoped the Legislature will lose no time in enacting a law which will permit the submission to the people of a charter that will make Greater Pittsburgh a reality. The plan will be beneficial not only because of the economies and improvements in efficiency that it will permit, but also because of the advertising value that will be derived from our becoming known as the nation's fourth or fifth largest city.

One of the things that Mayor-elect W. N. McNair's proposed municipal department of advertising will advertise is Pittsburgh's proximity to the coal fields. Attention might well be called to the superior quality of the coal from the Pittsburgh vein. Tests made by the Pennsylvania Railroad indicate this coal in a given-size locomotive probably will haul more cars than any other coal in the world.

The results of these tests, with other interesting information about Pittsburgh coal, are set forth in Prof. Henry Leighton's "Geology of Pittsburgh and Its Environs," a short and easily understood treatise issued by the Carnegie Museum. Every Pittsburgher should read it, and it should be used as a textbook in the schools.

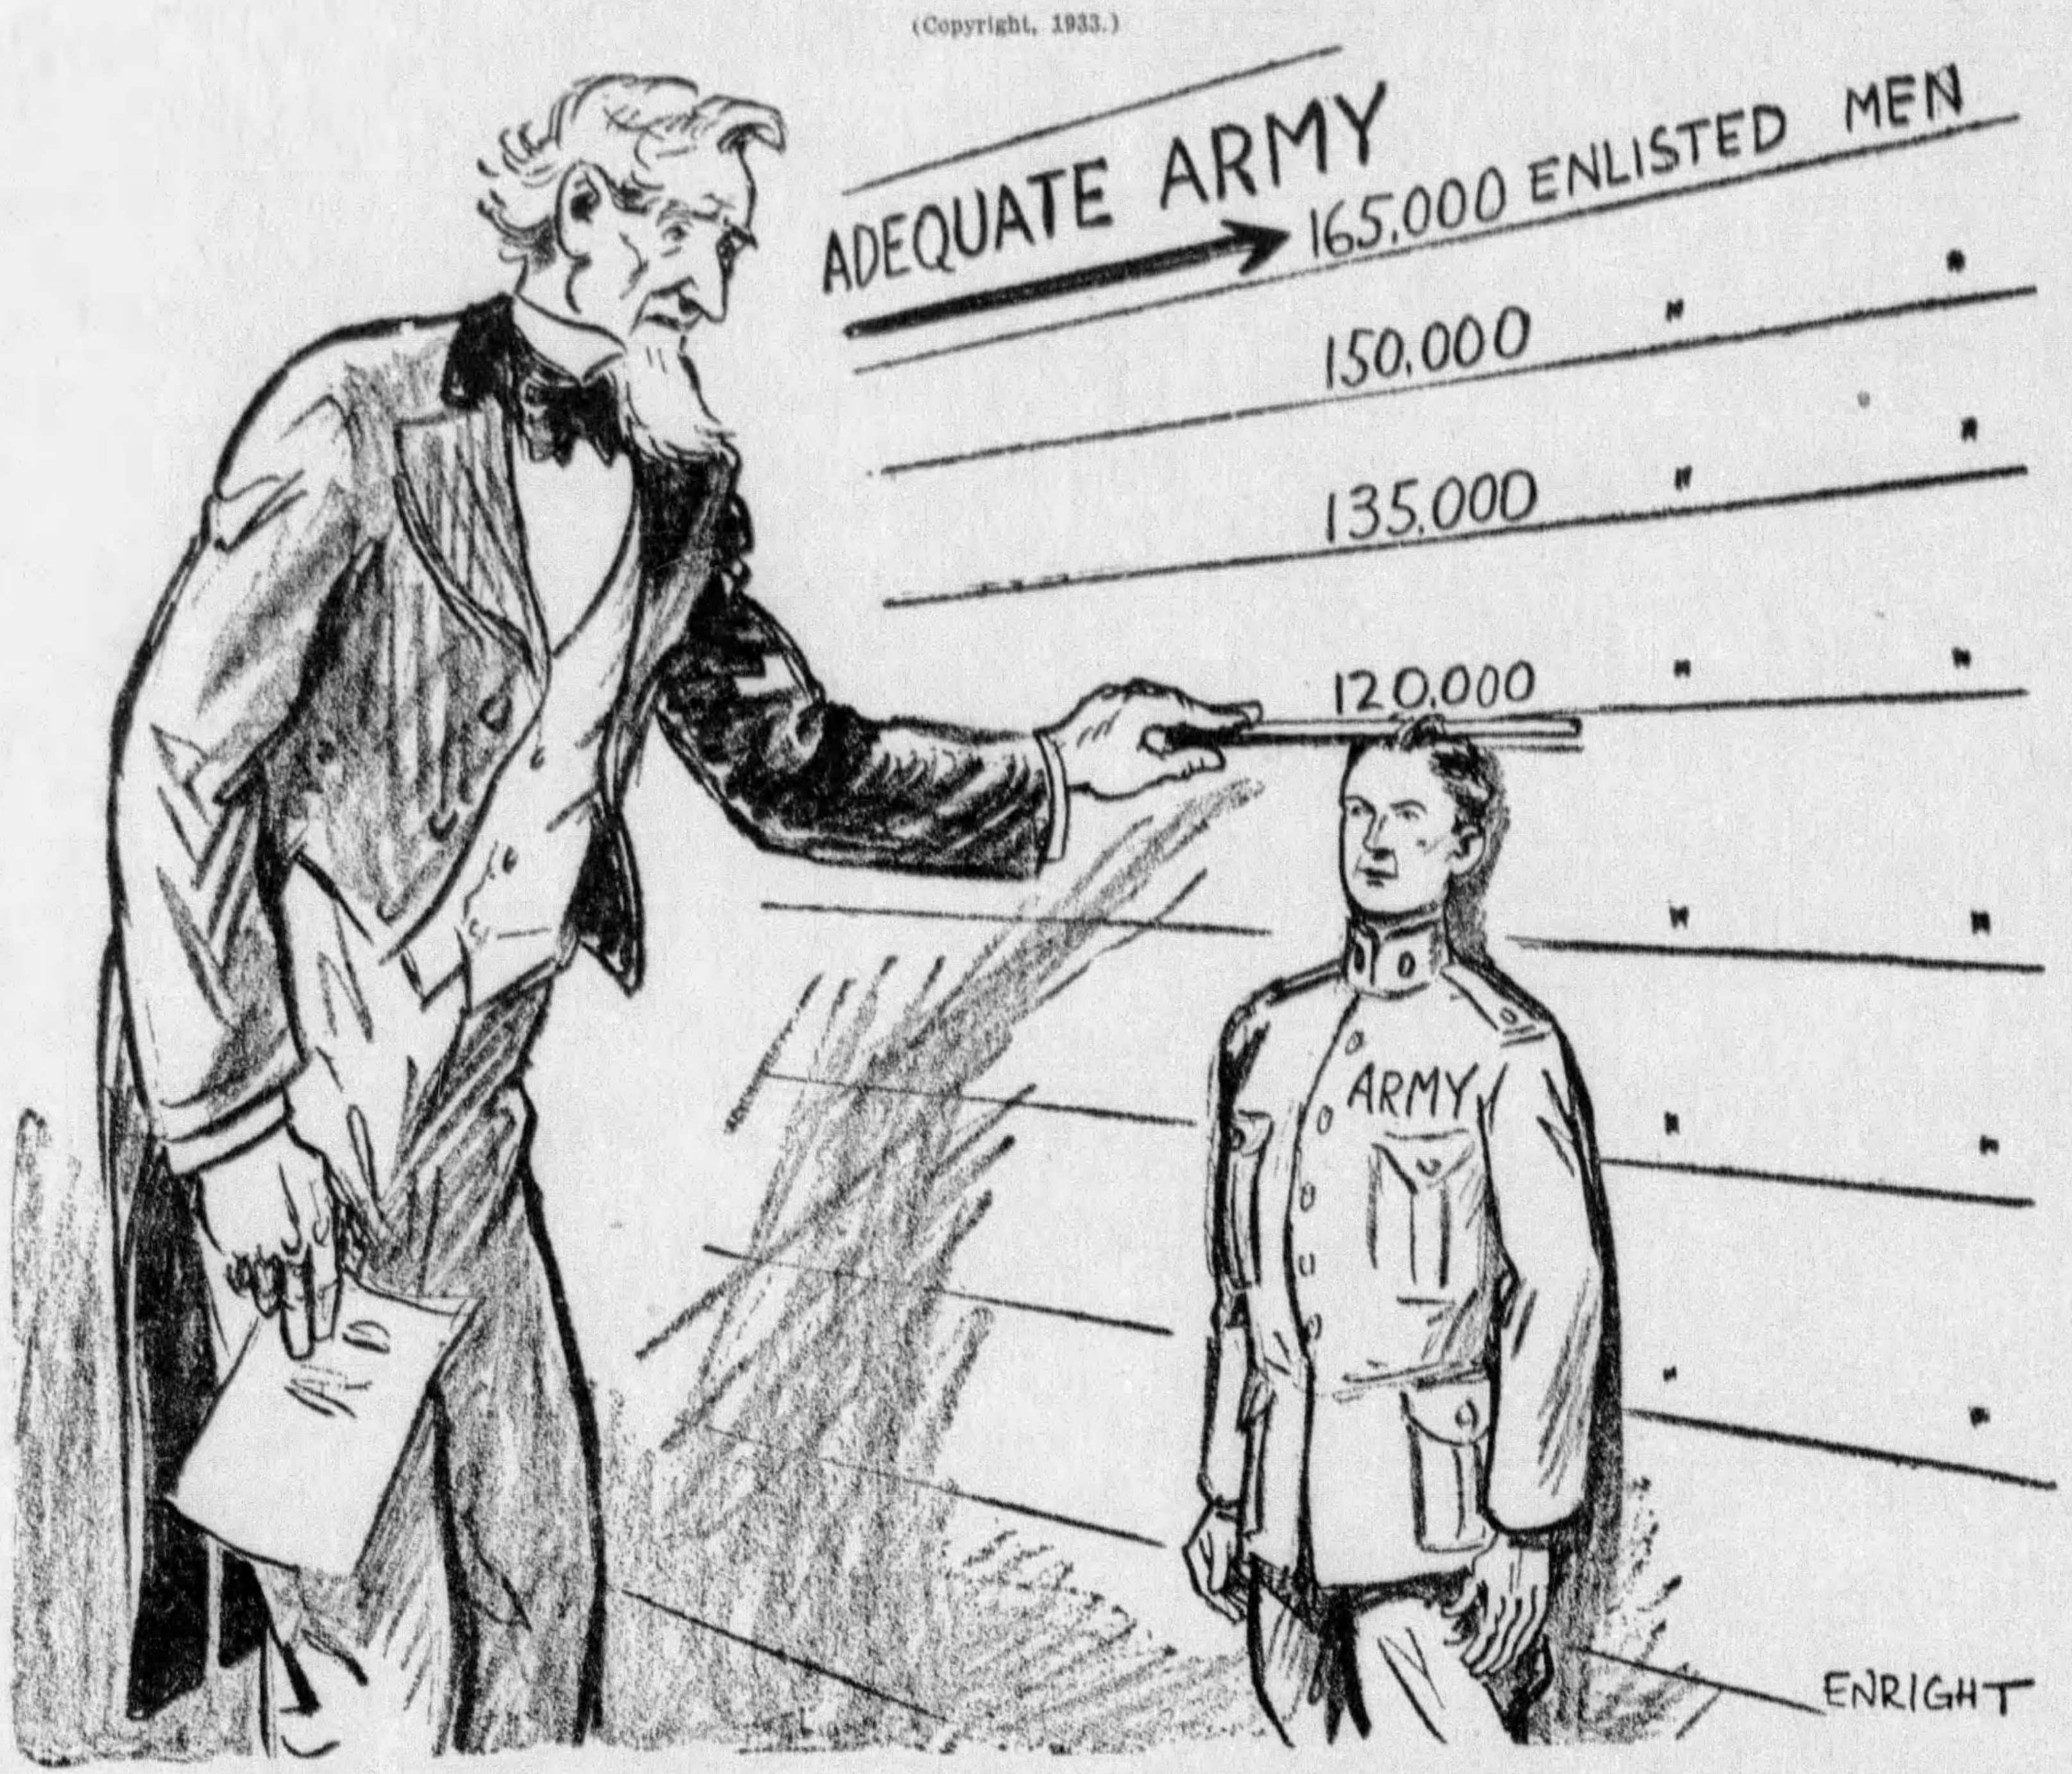
Another thing that should be read, and read within the next week or so, no matter if it has been read a number of times before, is Dickens' "Christmas Carol." Catch the Christmas spirit early! Dickens' fascinating story of Old Scrooge and Tiny Tim will help you to catch it. And do your Christmas shopping early, and mail your Christmas parcels early. It will help to make others happy.

There is a strong suggestion of Tiny Tim, by the way, in the frontispiece of tomorrow's American Weekly, the magazine distributed with the Sunday Sun-Telegraph. It is a full-page picture in colors of a brave little crippled boy, one of the "City Shadows" series by Percy Crosby, the distinguished creator of "Skippy."

Neglected by Mac at the Rho Sigma Rho sorority party, Tillie the Toiler vows she is through with him, and makes a date to go to the theater with Wally Whipple. What came out of this is pictured by Russ Westover in tomorrow's issue of Puck, the Comic Weekly section of the Sunday Sun-Telegraph. You will enjoy this and the numerous other funnies in Puck.

"Have to Build Him Up"

(Copyright, 1933.)



Gen. Douglas MacArthur, Chief of Staff of the Army, concludes his annual report to the Secretary of War with these warning words:

"In the obvious state of unrest now prevailing throughout the world, evidences of which are plainly visible even in our own country, an efficient and dependable military establishment, constantly responsive to the will of its Government, constitutes a rock of stability and one of a nation's priceless possessions.

"As much as at any time in our history the Army's efficiency should engage the earnest attention of every loyal citizen.

"It is my conviction that at this moment the Army's strength in personnel and material and its readiness for employment are BELOW THE DANGER LINE.

"I consider it of utmost importance to the United States that this condition be rectified without delay."

Gen. MacArthur's report suggests the action that Congress should authorize at its January session—including an immediate increase of enlisted men up to 165,000, with the necessary complements of officers and modernized equipment. And even these emergency provisions represent only a minimum, below authorized standards. As the Chief of Staff explained:

"Immediate adoption of EVERY MEASURE ADVOCATED would still leave us with an organized army of approximately HALF THE SIZE that Congress, after exhaustive study of World War experiences, deemed essential to the country's continued safety and authorized in the 1920 amendments to the National Defense Act."

In view of the undisputed facts Congress should carry out the recommendations IN FULL.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, Dec. 2.—Our Sealyham is now romping through Elysian fields on the thither side of the veil. It is not difficult to imagine him, a bit bewildered in his sudden transition, cocking a bewhiskered head and listening for familiar footsteps he no longer hears.

He has the forgiving heart of the loyal dog and doubtless, were he able, would lick the hand of his conscienceless poisoner. If he could talk, he might even say: "It wasn't very nice of you, sir, to take me from those I love and who love me. I only tried to make people happy in an unhappy world."

Likely he would say that. For Rainbow was a gentleman born and never in his four years of joyous living did he bear malice. His bright button eyes seemed forever pleading that he was trying not to be in the way, but had just barged in a moment to see that you were not lonely.

It is the fervent prayer of his grief-stricken mistress that wherever he is he will suffer no pangs of the loneliness he tried so earnestly to relieve among those he loved. And Rainbow loved every human being he came across. One of his choicest pals was Joe, the ash-man.

* * *

Rainbow might like to know, too, that his Boston playmate, who affected to ignore in more sedate years the absurd puppyisms of his junior, now trots around the apartment indulging questioning sniffs and squatting wonderingly before the pathos of that empty window! The window where Rainbow sat watchfully while a dear silver-haired lady of 80, whom he loved, napped gently close by in the quiet of the late afternoon. Not even a bone could lure him from this daily vigil.

* * *

There was a Pagliacci touch to Rainbow, a clown with a thin taint of sadness. He was always unwittingly involved in some outrageously preposterous comedy. He awkwardly upset upright lamps and missed the ensuing crash by an eyelash. He would walk into mirrors, and get himself hopelessly entangled—from neckties to curtain hangings. Then, his moments of arriere-pensee when he would sit statue-like, a picture of utter dejection. I now wonder in those melancholy megrims if some instinctiveness was not warning him, a thin rustle across the void, of mankind's often inhumanity toward dumb, trusting and helpless animals.

* * *

The Boston and I are missing Rainbow more than he will ever realize on our evening sundown walks. Always the Boston is looking back. Rainbow was the short-legged laggard, grousing along 20 paces or so behind, save in the park when a squirrel would flash across our path and go scurrying impudently out on a bough. Then Rainbow was all electric quiver and staccato barks. Sometimes when his tardiness would inspire a rebuke, he would quail under the stern point of a rebuking finger, roll over on his back and look so forlornly contrite we would wind up scratching him behind the ear.

* * *

For two years he had a perfect realization that he could tear into the Boston and trounce him soundly. He routed three bigger dogs in one fight. Yet, as though conscious he was somewhat a trespasser with an established dog, he permitted the Boston to nip his hindquarters and otherwise bully him when the right of priority was being maintained.

* * *

Until two days before he made his soldier-like exit he was the sturdiest, healthiest dog I've ever known. Life was a perpetual romp. On this morning Harry, a butler who fed him and under whose bed he slept, was alarmed because he did not eat. Never suspecting an insidious poison was bringing his life swiftly to a close, we thought little of it. All day his spirits seemed droopy, but he hopped into his window for his afternoon vigil. During the night he seemed restless, in the morning again he would not eat, and his thirst seemed unquenchable.

* * *

Yet, game to the end, he brought in his red play-ball but would make no effort to retrieve it. Instead, he gazed vacantly into nowhere. In my arms most of the agonizing day he mingled his little whimpers and patient sighs with my unashamed tears. Always when I spoke his name he feebly wagged his stubby tail. At 5 p. m., his window vigil hour, he seemed sleeping naturally. Tenderly he was placed on a basket in a bathroom while his master and mistress rejoiced at recovery signs. But his sleep was one from which there was no awakening in this world. A half hour later we found him, cold and stiff, a gush of blood trailing from his mouth, his play-ball only a few feet away.

LISTEN, WORLD!

By Elsie Robinson

'Except Ye Become as Little Children'—

Hard times passing. Maybe—maybe not. But one thing is sure. Good times will never come back to us again until we learn a lesson which Americans have forgotten for many a year. And what's that?

THE LESSON OF SIMPLICITY.

Once upon a time America was a simple place. We had very little. We did things for ourselves—carried our own water; hewed our own wood; cooked our own food. The days went slowly, monotonously. But we were happy.

We were happy because we took life as it came. We didn't rebel against it. We didn't try to beat the game with fat accumulations of wealth—great power—insane speed. We lived simply, as the grass and trees and little animals lived. And we found peace and pride and power in the simple movement of our days.

Then the machines came—and more and more people. Presently life was no longer simple. It was crowded and complicated. People no longer mattered much. Machines mattered. We fed people into the machines as we fed oil, wood, electricity. People became like fuel. They had little importance or meaning. They were harassed and humiliated by life's purposeless pressure.

So they tried to restore meaning to their lives by BUYING things instead of BEING things. They bought, and bought, and bought. They went, and went, and went. When The Crash came, we were all running around like mad men, grabbing at any new possession or sensation.

And ever since The Crash we've been remembering—wishing that "good luck" would come back again—thinking that we'd be happy if it did.

But we wouldn't. We'd be just as restless and muddled, as lonely and disappointed as we were before.

For THINGS can't give us contentment or peace. They are always outside us, and they are always chancy—now we have them, now we don't. So no heart can rest secure on its material possessions. Only that heart which has built joy and courage, wisdom and peace within itself, can be secure in the face of this changing world.

Even after these four dreadful years, most of us still didn't believe that. We were still waiting for the Good Old Days to return and solve all our troubles. But they never will. Only we, ourselves, can solve our troubles—and we can't do that with cash.

Long ago, another great people came to just such a pass as we have come. They, too, had been simple people once; then riches and power had turned their heads—and wrecked their government. They were taken into captivity; became, in time, subject to Rome. But still the Hebrews yearned for the lost "flesh pots of Egypt"—for the vanished pomp and glory of material possession.

Bitterly unhappy, they asked one great leader after another what they could do about it, just as we are asking now. And one day a man told them. He was a young man, and very poor. He came from a small country town, where he had labored as a common carpenter. He had no sophistication—no personal ambition—no fame. Yet there he stood, with the rough earth beneath his calloused, browned feet and the harsh light showing up his faded rags, and gave them the only true solution for their pain.

"So you want to be sure and happy again," he said. "You want that joyous confidence to come back to you, which you knew as children. Well, that's natural. You should want that—for that was the way life was meant to be. You were meant to be happy and strong. But you can't be happy when you live like this—when you stake your happiness on Things outside yourself. For the more Things you have the more you'll want. And so your discontent will grow.

"But if you'll stop wanting Things, and take life as it comes—finding your joy in simple happenings—then you'll be at peace with yourself."

For a moment he was still. Then clear and strong—so clear, so strong that his words have lived forever since, through all the ages—Jesus cried:

"EXCEPT YE BECOME . . . AS LITTLE CHILDREN, YE SHALL NOT ENTER INTO THE KINGDOM OF HEAVEN."

We must become as little children again. We must share as casually as little children share—accept each other as easily—find joy and delight as simply.

Then, and only then, can we enter into that "Kingdom of Heaven" which is the peace of a quiet heart.

MARRY-GO-ROUND

By Helen Rowland

Daughters of Eve

Brides are now being married in black velvet instead of white satin. But is this a defiance of superstition or merely a premonition that the worst is about to happen?

OH, TOMORROW IS OUR WEDDING DAY, IS IT NOT

Theoretically, every woman started her Christmas shopping, weeks ago; but to a man, Christmas is like his wedding day—he refuses even to THINK about it, until the day before.

* * *

Every woman envies a man that sublime optimism, with which he breezes in on the maid's day off, trailing a couple of unexpected guests for dinner—with only four lamb-chops in the ice-box.

* * *

Many a girl is steering for spinsterhood, because she innocently believes all those glowing feminist articles she reads, advocating woman's "right" to do the courting.

* * *

A man's weakest moment is when he is feeling convivial and pleased with himself; a woman's weakest moment is when she is feeling lonely and sorry for herself.

* * *

The only difference between two women, in the average man's opinion, is the difference in the brand of applesauce they pass out.

* * *

Some bridegrooms manage to look cheerful if sheepish; but most of them have the "trapped" expression of Towser being led to his weekly bath—or of Junior going to the dentist's.

* * *

If a woman's heels are too high, she runs a chance of a bad fall—but if her hat is too high, the fall is a tragic certainty.

I THINK A GIRL HAS A RIGHT TO DO THE COURTING
WELL-SEE YOU AGAIN-SOMETIME

The modern woman is becoming so sophisticated that she knows nearly everything about a man, except how to get him to the altar.

Human Side of the News

The Remarkable Career of L. F. Loree, President of the D. & H.—Holland's Tulip Mania

By Edwin C. Hill

LEONOR F. LOREE, forthright, original-minded railroad man, gives frank advice to young people starting out in the world. Always outspoken, Mr. Loree tells young men and women that they are up against tough times, and can't expect to become captains of industry overnight, or even next year. He tells them bluntly that it may be three years before they can get their teeth into the apple of business or professional opportunity.

Therefore, remarks Leonor F. Loree, they would be wise to employ as much of that waiting time as possible by reading books best suited to forming the mind and producing thought, and by thinking carefully about what they read. He mentions especially the Bible and Shakespeare.

Rather old-fashioned advice, but as sound as a young hickory tree. If an ambitious young man with a yearning to write had no other book upon which to form a style, the Bible alone would be enough. If a boy or girl can't learn to write strong, clear, forceful, colorful English after the model of the Good Book, then the art of writing simply is not in him or her.

Loree, at 75, and the extremely active head of the Delaware and Hudson Railroad, is a great executive and a remarkable individual. He got his start back in 1889 when the Johnstown flood swept down upon his division of the Pennsylvania Railroad. He cleared up the muck and wreckage so swiftly that he was running the whole Pennsylvania system west of Pittsburgh by the time he was 38.

That little dynamo in boots, the late E. H. Harriman took a liking to Loree and made him head of the Delaware and Hudson.

"That's the kind of man I like," said Harriman. "He is a man no one can down. When he thinks he is right, the rest of the world can go hang."

Built Up Big Cash Reserve

AND Leonor F. Loree has run the D. & H. ever since, running it as if it were his personal property and with much benefit to the stockholders. Few railroads have been richer in cash than the Delaware and Hudson. For years Loree built up its cash reserve against just such rainy days as are soaking us.

A few years ago he turned a deal which put $23,000,000 profit in the company's treasury, and then he acquired for the Delaware and Hudson something like 495,000 shares of the New York Central Railroad. He paid an average price of $22.36 a share. The Delaware and Hudson owns more New York Central stock than is held by the three big stockholders of the Vanderbilt family, Frederick, William K. and Harold.

Shaggy and elephantine, with quick, amused eyes and the lumbering gait of a bear, Leonor F. Loree is an arresting figure wherever he moves. He works in an office which reflects all the Victorian glories of the nineteenth century, with its sunburst crystal chandeliers, mantelpiece with carved lions' heads, wall-niches full of cockle-shells, stained glass windows, elegant ormolu radiators, shiny brass cuspidors, nymphs and cupids adorning the high ceiling and its gas log burning brightly on cool days. There he has his empire—this man who uses Wall Street and defies it, as suits his rugged purpose.

He lives on a hill-top in West Orange, N. J., where he raises fine chickens and fat cattle. Poole, of London, makes his clothes, which are usually baggy. He has one amusing eccentricity. He puts on a straw hat in early April and sticks to it until late November... His sideburns and whiskers are snow white, but his hair is a chestnut brown. There is something about him of Gen. Grant, and it isn't altogether the cut of his beard.

A most interesting personality, L. F. Loree, and a conspicuous example of the level-headed big business man who didn't go crazy during the big boom.

Holland's Excessive Supply of Tulips

THE government has been buying up and destroying pigs and other livestock to reduce the supply and raise prices. Holland is faced with a curiously different problem, along the same line of recovery. Famous for her tulips, Holland has been destroying bulbs by hundreds of thousands, for tulips are a drug on the market.

For 300 years tulips have meant almost as much to the Dutch as wheat means to the western farmer or cotton to the planter of the South. One of the most amazing bull markets the world ever knew—the craziest except, possibly, for the Mississippi Bubble of France—was the tulip boom and panic which took place just about the time that this country was getting its start.

Brought over from Turkey—the same tulip means turban in Turkish—tulips became such a rage among the Dutch that the ordinary industry of the country was neglected. Men invested their entire fortunes in a few tulip bulbs. One man paid forty-six hundred florins, a new carriage, two gray horses and a complete set of harness for one rare bulb—approximately, $10,000.

Stock exchanges in Amsterdam and Rotterdam dealt in tulip prices, not in securities. All the tricks and devices that we knew about in the American bull market of 1929 were employed in Holland's great bull market in tulips. Men grew rich, fantastically rich. Others were ruined by the mad craze for speculation in tulips.

Roosevelt Lining Up Congress on Taxes

By James T. Williams, Jr.

WHEN Congress reconvenes the first week of the new year, the House Committee on Ways and Means may have a new chairman.

Representative Doughton, of North Carolina, the present chairman, will probably accept an appointment to the Tariff Commission, where there is a vacancy created by the recent death of the late Representative Collier, of Mississippi. In the redistricting of his state, Mr. Collier lost his seat in Congress and his appointment to the Tariff Commission was one of the first made by President Roosevelt.

Should Mr. Doughton follow his predecessor in the chairmanship of the Ways and Means Committee from that powerful legislative post to a place on the Tariff Commission, Representative Samuel B. Hill, of the State of Washington, would succeed Mr. Doughton at the head of the Ways and Means Committee.

By occupation Mr. Doughton is a farmer and livestock raiser. He saw service on the Board of Agriculture of North Carolina before his election to Congress.

Mr. Hill is a lawyer by profession, a graduate of the University of Arkansas, and has had experience both as a prosecuting attorney and as judge of the Superior Court for seven years. He was elected to the Sixty-eighth Congress at a special election in 1923, and has been re-elected to each succeeding Congress.

* * *

Tax Program Being Formulated

MR. HILL is now chairman of the subcommittee of the Ways and Means Committee which has been holding hearings on the revision of existing tax laws for several weeks.

Upon his return from conferences with the President at Warm Springs, the Acting Secretary of the Treasury, Mr. Morgenthau, after consultation with Mr. Hill, announced that the Treasury Department would submit specific recommendations for revenue legislation for consideration by the Ways and Means Committee well in advance of the reconvening of Congress.

This means that the administration and Democratic leaders of the house have begun to co-operate in the formulation of a tax program which the President will ask the Congress to adopt at the coming session.

As his adviser on tax matters, Morgenthau has appointed Professor Magill of Columbia University who will represent the Treasury Department in consultations with the subcommittee of which Mr. Hill is chairman.

The fact that Mr. Doughton would prefer to round out his public service as a member of the Tariff Commission and that his appointment would bring to the chairmanship of the Ways and Means Committee a man of the ability and experience of Representative Hill, of Washington, make it probable that President Roosevelt will look with favor upon Mr. Doughton's aspiration.

The two most powerful committees of the House are the Committee on Ways and Means, which recommends to the House how money should be raised to run the government, and the Committee on Appropriations, which tells the House how the money should be spent.

South Gains By Seniority Rule

COMMITTEE chairmanships in the House are made under a rule of seniority by which the committee member of the majority power who has served longest on the committee is entitled to the chairmanship.

It is this rule of seniority which gives to the "Solid South" its preponderance in committee chairmanships. In many Congressional districts in the Southern states, which are solidly Democratic, the representative in Congress is re-elected every two years and gains a seniority that ultimately gets him a chairmanship when the Democrats control the House.

The retirement of Mr. Doughton would transfer his chairmanship from the heart of the "Solid South" to the northwestern corner of the country, and the State of Washington would supplant the State of North Carolina in the leadership of one of the two great committees of the House.

More changes of the same sort would bring about a better geographical distribution of the chairmanships and strengthen, by nationalizing, the leadership of the party in power. It is not often, however, that the President gets a chance to assist the House leaders of his party in redistributing chairmanships. This is another reason why the aspiration of Mr. Doughton for promotion to the Tariff Commission will probably enlist the President's support.
